GETTING OFF

PRAISE THE LORD AND PASS THE AMMUNITION

Most minorities are used to some form of persecution. And when that pressure eases up occasionally, they begin persecuting each other. The Protestants got it from the Catholics and vice versa, depending on who is the local majority. The Jews get it from both of them and most everybody else. But the ones everybody can all have an open season on are the gays.

In New York City, for the Gay Pride Parade, the coordinators came up with a gimmick to cover the cost of the portable toilets. For seventy bucks you could "name a toilet for your favorite homophobe." The first two to be sponsored were the "John Cardinal O'Connor Throne Room" and "Yehuda's Heaven" (for Rabbi Yehuda Levin). Before someone came up with a name for a toilet dedicated to Jerry Falwell, the Port-O-San Corp. said they would not rent the toilets if that was the use they were being put to.

And speaking of Jerry "Moral Majority" "Liberty Federation" "Christian Antidiscrimination" Falwell—he has pressured U.S. Attorney General "Mickey" Meese into threatening the Southland Corp. into throwing Playboy and Penthouse out of their stores, something Falwell alone had failed to bring about. The Justice Department has become a lackey for the Christian Crazies, whose next target will in all likelihood be gays.

Of course, nothing is so bad that somebody can't make it a little worse. The gay community continues to reel over the onslaught of AIDS which, for lack of a cure or even a treatment, is decimating our brothers left and right. The government is indifferent at best and what monies it has reluctantly aimed at combatting the disease, it has had to be forced into. Falwell et al. have predictably taken every opportunity to treat the plague as opportunistically and as unchristianlike as possible.

But for the moment, these are not the factors we have to concern ourselves with. The worst enemy is ourselves. We have to knock off the drugs, the senseless exposure, the healthy-destroying antics we luxuriated in for so many years in search of a good time. We have to support our own. Nobody else is going to do it. Certainly not this administration and certainly not many of the religious charities. Not even the United Way.

A good slogan for these times should be "No charities but gay charities!"

Amen.

—John H. Embry.

HELP US TIE A PROFESSOR TO THIS CHAIR.

It's called an endowed chair. And it's only $400,000. Which may seem a bit steep, considering the fact it doesn't recline. Or vibrate. Or even have arms. But compared to the price of endowed chairs at other major universities, it's a respectable bargain. And how is an endowed chair any different from the one in your dining room? For one thing, it'll last forever. Because your $400,000 establishes a perpetual endowment fund that covers everything but faculty salary (a state responsibility).

So year after year, an outstanding Cal professor will receive research assistance, equipment and other crucial support services.

And year after year, the generous donor—be it an individual, class or corporation—will receive well-deserved recognition.

Most importantly, endowed chairs enable Cal to attract and retain preeminent faculty in virtually any field of learning you choose.

Or you can even choose to have us choose.

But the fact remains, without the support of a "chair," many of our top scholars are sitting targets for rival recruiters.

Call Vice-Chancellor Curtis R. Simic at (415) 642-1212, and tell him you want to help Cal meet its critical goal of 100 new endowed chairs by 1990.

Now's the time to take a stand. And have a seat.

PORNOGRAPHY WATCH

The Supreme Court has made it easier for police to seize books and films that they believe to be obscene. Now authorities seeking warrants need only to show that there is a "fair probability" that they will find evidence of a crime. In the ruling, the court upheld the seizure of five sexually explicit videocassettes, including California Valley Girls and Debbie Does Dallas.

The Attorney General's Commission on Pornography, commonly known as the Meese Commission, will release its report later this summer. Some of the findings and suggestions:

- Most pornography sold in the U.S. is potentially harmful and can lead to violence.

- Violent pornography, including depictions of rape and sadomasochism, was placed in a separate, significantly more harmful category. The report says, "Substantial exposure to sexually violent materials... bears a casual relationship to antisocial acts of violence and, for some subgroups, possibly to unlawful acts of sexual violence."

- They suggested that Congress adopt a law prohibiting the use of performers under the age of 21, essentially branding 18-21 year olds children, in "certain sexually explicit depictions."

- They also recommended that the Federal Communications Commission use its full regulatory powers against "obscene dial-a-porn telephone services."

The ACLU reported that the above-described report will become one of the "hottest-selling" documents around. The report is said to describe a book called Tying Up Rebecca chapter by chapter, and films such as The Devil in Miss Jones and Biker Slave Girls scene by scene. ACLU attorney Barry Lynn criticized the panel saying that "they can wallow in this stuff for a year without any apparent effect, but if the average American sees it, then he's headed down the road to criminality or deviance."

SADOMASOCHISM IN THE SCHOOLS?

Corporal punishment in the schools has hit the papers in the San Francisco area lately. We thought we'd share a few of the tidbits:

- Corporal punishment is allowed by California law with the written consent of the student's parents. A bill that would have banned spanking was defeated in the California senate. Of course, pain caused by athletic competition would have been exempt from the ban.

- In an editorial in a local daily titled "Spank a Student, Break a Law" the paper compared schools with the military and prison systems in an amazing jump of logic supporting their antspanking stance.

- In a letter to the editor that followed the above editorial, Jack Murphy of San Francisco wrote, "I agree that 'the individual's who misbehave must be held solely responsible,' and that's why my teenage son winces when he sits on his wallet, and I don't. Let's take the right person to the woodshed both at home and school." We know Drummer dads out there would agree with Dad Murphy.

- Contrasting all this is the report of a suit brought by an Oakland parent against school officials because he claims his son was tied to his desk with a jump rope because the boy wouldn't remain seated during class. And on the same day that this story appeared, we came across an ad for the University of California Berkeley, soliciting funds from alumni with the picture of an empty chair and a headline which reads, "Help us tie a professor to this chair."

SHAVEN SALESMEN

As we wend our way back to the 1950s comes the news that the Tandy Corporation, parent company of Radio Shack, has ordered that all employees be clean-shaven as part of a stricter new dress code. They claimed that nobody with a beard ever sold a computer. (Didn't they ever see Steve Wozniak who started Apple?) Then we hear that the Coast Guard has ordered that its men shave off their beards, although they are allowed to keep their moustaches. A national trend? We hope not.

ANOTHER OLDIE BITES THE DUST

On June 15 another end of another era came and went on Folsom Street with the passing of the oldest leather bar in San Francisco. Febe's came within a day of being the first leather bar in San Francisco, being beaten out twenty, almost twenty-one, years ago by the Tool Box, according to owners Don Geist and John Kissinger.

The bar happened to have the name "Febe's" on a sign in front when they took over and Febe's it remained with a pace-setting pitch-black interior for years. Then came a remodeling several years ago, best described as beige-mirrored moderne. Its clientele remained steadfastly loyal, aging along with the bar. Upstairs, until the remodeling, was Nick's, a broom-closet-sized leather emporium which later expanded into the Trading Post farther up on Folsom.

Febe's lease expired and so it seems has its place in the scheme of things, as the Yuppies close in on South of Market.

DRUMMER MEDIA WATCH

The following are culled from reader submissions and what we catch, as we read and watch for items of interest to you.

- The movie Hollywood Vice Squad is advertised by a pair of male legs in a parade-rest V stance, with a single handcuff hanging down. Above this the ad reads, just at crotch level, "We've got the disease, there is no cure."

- A St. Louis reader sent a dance review of a company doing a piece called "Lemurs" in which the dancers wore rubber gas masks in order to simulate the look of the lemur's large eyes and muzzle.

- A San Francisco area Catholic lay organization was recently reported to include in their aesthetic practices "mortifications of the flesh," including fasting, sleeping on wooden boards, self-flagellation and the wearing of a cilice, a spiked, wire-mesh band, usually worn around the upper thigh. Corporal mortification was traditionally used to deaden the flesh and its lusts and as an imitation of Christ's scourging and crucifixion. According to the church's vicar, "Corporal mortification is part of the solid tradition of the church."

- A reader clipped an article from a college newspaper in which writer John L. Greene, a hunky, smiling young man with a shock of hair and bushy moustache is shown holding joyfully onto a pair of shit-kickers with Vibram soles. The article titled, "Boots source of joy for good ol' boy" includes the following: "I have this thing about boots. The feel of leather on my feet is like the feel of an autumn evening after a ferociously hot summer. The aroma of mink oil is like the scent of honeysuckle growing on our fence out back in the springtime. I like the way some of my boots make my feet feel heavy and powerful, while others make them feel fast and dangerous." Sounds like a Drummer man in the making, in spite of (or because of) his girlfriend who "despises my boots."

- While we're talking about footwear, there was Bianca Jagger saying on national TV that she truly is a "shoe fetishist." And isn't that what Imelda Marcos really is with her 3500 pairs of shoes?

BRITISH OBSCENITY

We have reported before that Giovanni's Room, a gay bookstore in Philadelphia and Gay's the Word, a British gay bookstore, are fighting conspiracy charges by the British government that the bookstores conspired to import obscene books into Britain. Word from Giovanni's Room is that over $1500 has been raised to fight this attempt to censor what gay men and lesbians can read in Britain. But considering whom they are up against, much more is needed.

Contributions can be sent to Giovanni's Room, 1145 Pine St., Philadelphia, PA 19107.

We are sorry to report that British Customs is continuing in their crusade against gay literature. This spring they seized Man to Man: Gay Couples in America by Dr. Charles Silverstein, a counseling book that is apparently popular due to the AIDS health crisis. This creates another court case waiting to go to court pending the outcome of the conspiracy case due to be tried in October 1986.

DRUMMER FORUM

DEVOTED TO THE DRUMMER PHILOSOPHY, WHATEVER THAT MAY BE...

Discussing pornography is like embarking on a journey into a world of schizophrenia, so opposed are the views, opinions and realities that surround the subject. As a writer of sexual fiction, I'm fascinated by the motives behind pornography. Why does someone write sexually graphic fiction? Why choose sex as a subject? Why do writers so often consider pornography and literature to be at odds? Do pornographers care about their writing? Do they have political consciences? Do they ever retire?

Of late there has been a great deal of hoopla on the subject, especially with the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography hearings and reports in Washington. For many reasons those hearings have become the laughing-stock of the literary and artistic world, for the bias involved in trying a priori to prove a connection where none might exist—between pornography and behavior. But what interests me about the hearings—and about discussions of the subject in general—is the overall lack of concern about the creation of the material. It's as if pornography simply exists, comes out of nowhere, like the weather.

It is important to hear from the pornographer directly, for in all discussions, hearings, learned essays, scholarly tomes and critiques, we never hear a word from the creators of pornography about their art. Of course such discussions would most certainly be varied, as varied as each pornographer is from the next. So, as a preface to this piece let me state the obvious: these are my own thoughts, which are necessarily different from those of, say, John Preston or T.R. Witomski or Anne Rice (A.N. Rocquelaure and Anne Rampling).

There exists a romantic stereotype of the struggling, young writer who, for lack of recognition and funds, turns to a pen name and some steamy fiction to finance his or her Great American Novel, which, curiously, progresses at a rate of no more than a few pages a month. The struggling, young writer places a few sex stories here and there or grinds out some porn pulp, receives a few checks, and voila, the serious novel is financed by the cheap stuff.

Once the serious work is complete and published, the writer's literary reputation is to be established, and the pen name and porno is ditched and concealed—it was only a useful stepping stone. Now there are greater things to do, more "serious subjects."

In much later years or course the writer suddenly reveals his identity as such-and-such a sleaze writer, and all the lost erotica gets collected and issued in handsome volumes celebrating the diverse styles and genres that have been mastered by the writer. Critics and readers then delight at the human touch of it all and marvel at the voluminous output of this amazingly versatile writer.

Well, such a romantic vision once appealed to me and to many of my friends, but the fact is that this is real life, and it rarely measures up to such ideals. I started writing porn on a lark, and while my name is certainly not "household," I, like so many gay pornographers, have given the subject a great deal of thought, probably too much all told.

But very soon after beginning to write sexual fiction, I began to consider political commitment in writing porn—not necessarily in terms of subject matter of characterization, but rather in terms of what I was doing and why. After all, I did not live in a vacuum. I was aware that many people considered pornographers to be the scum of the earth. I had read Andrea Dworkin, and followed the protests of Women Opposed to Pornography. Feminist outrage, Christian guilt and literary peril settled on my mind.

It was a very complicated thing, because I was writing gay male porn and straight porn. I didn't want to be doing something that would ultimately lead to further sexism, dehumanization or, worse, outright objectification of a very subjective thing.

My conclusion has been that every gay story, no matter whether raunchy or romantic, safe or "unsafe," affirms a subculture which goes against the grain of the prevailing morals. Well, at least it goes against the grain of what we are given to believe are prevailing morals—right wing, traditional ideologies. In its most extreme analysis, homosexual pornography (or any gay-themed fiction for that matter), contributes in every way to a diminishment of the system which can hold us all back with its sexism, homophobia and so on.

Of course this is an anarchical position which is often construed as lending weight to the argument that homosexuality and its culture is a threat to home and family. And in a certain twisted way of thinking, this is true. There are gay leaders—pacifiers—who try to pass gay people off as just the same as the rest—just folks—except for what goes on in bed. And while for the most part this is true, that very difference is the basis for much prejudice.

This isn't news. This is what the gay community and its politicians have been grappling with for decades. And I don't really agree with any of the foregoing political claptrap. I'm not against families. I'm not opposed to right-wing ideologies, in and of themselves. But, I am against any sort of tyrannizing of these ideas which suggest that there is only one viable way to lead your life. That kind of thinking—so narrow, so unquestioning of the "givens" of our culture and system—needs to be broken down. And so, in its own small way, pornography that shakes people up, that makes them stop and shriek with delight or horror, is both political and highly moral.

To support the breakdown of such narrow-mindedness is not a mournous or evil stance. An opposition to things as they are now means only that one sees that a great deal of change must come about. The family will not disappear; it will merely change form. (In fact, it already has, from the large extended families of a century ago to the fragmented nationally far-flung families we see today. The concept of the happy little "Father Knows Best" group exists for the most part on the TV screen; primarily in advertisements for kitchen goods.) The whole thrust of the gay movement is to get people to wake up, open their eyes and confront reality as it is; to stop playing these misdirected and dangerous games of illusion and delusion.

But not to lose sight of pornography and its motive—pornographic writing (of the consensual variety) is a full expression of the goals many of us share—the fusion of body and spirit, the triumph of liberty over puritanism, the realization that sex and sexuality are integral parts of being human and are not shameful. It is an affirmation of lifestyle, of attitude, of something different and something that needs to be brought out of the dark. And, of course, it is entertaining.

Highbrow critics decry that erotica and pornography profile the lowest common denominators of our culture, gay or straight. The motivation of pornographers, however, is of the highest ethical value and public service: to disestablish the repressive apparatus of shame and shock, inhibition and denial, and latency and invisibility. For it is the shame of sexuality and the notions of sin and dirtiness that are the greatest enemies of all sexual freedom.

SCANNING THE OBITUARIES

We are indebted to B.A.R. columnist MIKE HIPPLER for the following column entitled "Scanning the Obituaries" which is reprinted here with permission:

In the old days, like everyone else in town, I read the B.A.R. from back to front. First came the classifieds, to see which of my friends were "modeling" (this week), then came Porn Corner, and finally the latest dish from Mr. Marcus.

Much has changed since then, however. Karr and Mr. Marcus are still around, but many who once read their columns are not. Our community has been devastated by a virus from God-knows-where. As a result, when we open the paper these days, many turn not to the X-rated section in the back, but to the obituaries in the middle.

We think not "Sleaze," but "Please—don't let me read the names of old friends today."

A few statistics first. During the month of March, 68 people died of AIDS-related diseases in San Francisco. Only 30 obituaries appeared in the B.A.R., however, and three of these were not AIDS-related. Of the 18 whose ages were listed, the oldest was 59, the youngest 28. The average age was 37.

At least eight of these men had lovers or long-term companions whose relationships with the deceased were cited as a source of strength and support for one or both of the parties involved. Other survivors include family, friends and even pets. The lover of one man pointed out that his friend died with "our kitty by his side."

Another man will be missed by "his constant canine companions Noodle and Zipper." A third man was surrounded when he died by "his favorite stuffed animals, his penguin collection and most of his effects of home."

Nearly all had a funeral service of some sort. One man made an "adamant" request for a traditional Catholic ceremony. Another wanted his friends to celebrate his life at an open house held in his home following his death. The friends of one man gathered at a picnic; the friends of another held an art show featuring his work. One man's ashes were scattered along the Pacific coastline; another's were dispersed near Angel Island.

None of the obituaries commemorating these men was written by a professional writer. Each was submitted instead by a friend of the deceased. Consequently, the obituaries vary greatly. In many, information is sketchy and incomplete; others are more thorough.

Some are touching, quite poetic. A few are dolorous, mournful, even lugubrious.

And a surprising number are to some degree humorous—deliberately so. Friends of Mark Powers warned, for instance, that he "threatened dire punishment if anyone attempted to canonize him after his death." And friends of Mark O'Brien noted that "he can also be remembered for his portrayal of Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside in the 1980 all-male version of Mame."

Many of the friends were simply grateful, as were the friends of Scott Elliot, for the time they shared with the deceased. Others were inspired by the examples set by the dying. Said the friends of Collin B. Kratz, "His kindness and courage in difficult times shall serve as an inspiration to all those who knew him."

One man, an atheist, was even persuaded to believe in God by his lover's faith and spirit.

Nearly all the men who died were eulogized by their friends for some particular quality. One was praised for his "great generosity of spirit," another for his "breadth of knowledge, depth of kindness, exquisite cooking and the beauty brought to all touched."

One was admired for his "very special energy and will," another for "his awesome courage, mordant wit, outrageous iconoclasm, genuine loving kindness, and, not least, the best Boston accent and Irish good looks this side of Somerville."

Yet despite all this information, despite the facts, the figures, the statistics—even the love and the sorrow, I feel I know very little about most of these men. How do you sum up a life in such a short space, after all? How can you possibly say all that ought to be said?

I think that the friend who wrote Bruce Armitage's obituary did it best. He does not say how old Bruce was when he died or what he did for a living. He does not tell us about his educational background or professional affiliations.

He does tell us this, however: "[Bruce] was a little guy with big blue eyes who did such things as help a stranger on a bus and then made best friends with her; grew beautiful begonias and corn in the hills of Massachusetts with rows of Mary Jane in between; liked the spontaneous quality of life and would suddenly decide to make nutmeg doughnuts at 2:30 A.M.; made adventures out of his life; made friends out of his acquaintances; made friends decide to love him." Who, reading this, could not love Bruce as well?

I knew none of the thirty whose obituaries were printed in this paper in March, but I've known some whose names appeared both before and since. It is painful to find those names in the space marked Death. It is painful to find any names there.

Yet, despite the hurt, I will continue to read the obituaries, for I want to be assured that if we—you, me, the people around us—must die, we will not die unnoticed. What is said may be incomplete, awkward or inadequate, but it must be said.

Hopefully, however, our obituaries will do more. Hopefully, the few paragraphs allotted to us will give our friends the chance to say, as they did to John Ryan, "Love ya, cowboy," or to conclude, as they did for Bruce Armitage, "How can we say he's gone—when he's so much an indelible part of us."

I never knew Gerd Wagener, but in some small way I can agree with his friends: "[He] will remain in our hearts forever." —Mike Hippler

COSTLY SHIT

What is this shit? America's Mag for the Macho Male is one, big, fucking ripoff at $4.95. For the same price, or a whole dollar less, I can get loads of color pics of good-looking men in other publications.

If I wanted a personals listing, I'd pick up The Native for a buck, which is what your magazine seems to be an excuse for. I figured I'd get some better shots of the hunky, older guy on the cover, or how 'bout some shots of real men?

Look, if I wanted to be cock-teased, I'd pick somebody up at Charlie's.

Send me issues 30 or 35, 56 or 70—unless they are all based on this hot-coverman-zip-inside policy. In which case you can send me this month's Advocate Men instead.

ROGER BOOTS AT IT AGAIN

Very soon I shall retire from work at age 65 and I am still in very good health. During my retirement years, I plan to do, a few months of each year, something that I have always fantasized about doing since my early childhood. As a child, I read a book which described the life of a "Boots" at an English inn in Great Britain. And that vivid description of a boy's life impressed me so much, that I have wished all my life to have been living in his days and doing the job that he was given the opportunity to do.

You know that a "Boots" was a valet, a servant at an inn whose duties were to service the male travelers' boots, wait on them, clean and polish them. The boy was paid no salary, but worked only for his keep.

In those days, people traveled only on horseback or carriages since there were no cars nor trains. When those travelers arrived at the inn at the end of a long journey, at any hour of day or night, their boots and spurs were dusty, dirty or muddy. The "Boots" had to do a first cleaning of those boots on the feet of the travelers before they even entered the inn, removing the bulk of mud from them with a sponge and water.

Later on, as the boots dried out, the "Boots" was called to finish his work. And the natural lubricant of the leather, which was lost in the process of boot cleaning and drying, was replaced by tongue and mouth, bathing the boots with the mucous component of the saliva without making it oily and thus allowing again a gleaming and refulgent shine.

The boy was always in attendance and he was called "Boots" by both the innkeeper and the travelers alike. In addition to cleaning and polishing the boots, his job was to act as a 'bootjack to pull off the boots from the travelers' feet in their rooms, massage their feet, wash them, etc. During the evenings, when the travelers were sitting in front of the fireplace chatting with each other and drinking, the "Boots," if not busy cleaning other travelers' boots on their feet, was used as a footstool by several booted feet.

The reason why that story impressed me so much is because I have always been fascinated to ecstasy by people wearing high black leather spurred riding boots or cowboy boots. Even today, the only movies I look at are western movies just to feast my eyes on the boots of cowboys. I even enjoy being called "Boots." It gives me a pleasurable feeling. I even like calling myself Roger Boots.

The purpose of this letter is to ask you if it would be possible for me in the coming years to work as a bootblack at your hotel (without pay) to service... wait on... clean and polish the cowboy boots of male customers and even those of the male hotel staff. The satisfaction I would get out of servicing those cowboy boots on male feet would be enough pay for my work, plus, of course, the use of a small den to sleep in and clean more boots overnight and eating leftovers from the kitchen.

However, money could be paid by the customers for boot services according to what kind of services they desire. And that money would be turned in to the hotel. The hotel could have different categories of boot services and charge the customers accordingly. For instance, a shine accompanied with the application of saliva with the tongue and mouth would cost more than an ordinary shine. I would be ready to perform a variety of boot services as long as they are described to me and that there is no sexual involvement or violence exerted on me by anyone.

I would be ready to perform such duties free (without pay) as long as I work on male boots and preferably cowboy boots. And if the cowboy boots have spurs on, it is even better. Texas or Arizona, I think, are ideal places to meet men who wear cowboy boots!... and perhaps New Mexico and other states where men wear cowboy boots every day. If hotels do not care to employ me, perhaps some big cattle ranches who hire several cowboys could. I could be the "Boots" of the bunkhouse.

EXHIBITIONISTS, WHERE ARE YOU?

I'm an avid exhibitionist. A real turn-on is the prospect of being seen while JO-ing in various places! Now, I know others are turned on by flashing, showing or stroking their meat in public places or in front of their windows or for themselves in front of multiple mirrors.

Do you know where there may be a club for exhibitionists?

Washington, DC

(Editor's note: We don't know about such a club, but someone out there will let us know if there is one already in existence. If not, why not start one yourself? And at the same time, since you are into being seen pulling your pud, why not take a photo of yourself and send it to Drummer for our Tough Customers section? We'll be waiting, J.L.)

ONE OF A KIND

I am writing this letter to tell you how impressed I am with your magazine, Drummer. I have never seen anything like it before, and due to the British attempts in doing such magazines, I doubt I'll ever see one like it again.

DADDY BUSTS ASS

Just picked up Drummer 93, with that great photo spread of the upcoming video The Care and Training of the Male Slave. After the preview in your magazine, I'm anxiously awaiting its release. Among other reasons is the reappearance of the paddle. In addition to the usual instruments pictured and written about in Drummer, it's good to see the paddle back in use in the firm grip of a man like Ken Savage.

I'm a dad to a very, very good son. He's a good son because he knows where the paddle is around here. And you can bet if it ain't on the wall, he and I are out in the garage in the middle of a "board session." He breaks the rules, I bust his ass.

Thanks, guys, for doing it right. And thanks, Ken Savage, for your belief in the most time-honored means of correction there is. After all, how many of us never had a mean coach in high school?

How about it, guys? How about a locker-room ass busting in an upcoming issue?

MORE MISTAKES

Like everyone else, I am above average. When I read, on page 3 (Drummer 93) of your policy to make at least one dreadful and obvious mistake per issue to hide small mistakes, I saw at once how it would work. I also saw that the mistake should be one that would be spotted by the reader early on in his reading.

Like everyone else, I spotted the obvious mistake on page 98, where chthonic is defined as "pertaining to the underworld," which makes it sound like it is related to gangsters. As everyone knows, chthonic means "pertaining to the gods and spirits of the underworld." This relates it to Roman mythology. I'm not sure how you knew that this would be seen early in reading Drummer 93. Is this some sort of esoteric skill known only to editors?

(Editor's note: The above letters only prove two things. The first is that Drummer's readers are intelligent and well-read. The other is that contrary even to what we might like to think at times, we are human and prone to human errors. By the way, we did have to correct punctuation and spelling errors in both of the above letters. But, we appreciate our readers' attention and we're glad that you care enough to let us know you're out there.)

We know of only one other masturbator that frees the hands from the penis and works by remote control like the Oro-Simulator. This other unit costs from $400 to a full $900 depending upon the model. The Oro-Simulator was originally figured to be very competitive at around $100. We are sure you will see Oro-Simulator offered elsewhere at $69.95. We are pleased we can now rush one to you for the all inclusive price of $39.95! So, for the same price or less than clumsy, old fashioned battery or electrically operated, hands-on masturbators, you can now own and enjoy the one and only Oro-Simulator.

MAIMED BEAUTY

When we published Drummer 93 with "The Deformity Lover" by Felice Picano, "Maimed Beauty" by Mark I. Chester, photographs of amputees and dwarfs by George Dureau, and "Other Bodies" by Michael Agreve, we knew we were riding the cutting edge of gay male radical sexuality. But we weren't quite ready for the torrent of letters that we have received about this work (some of which have already appeared in Malecall in Drummer 94 and 95). So we gathered up the best of the unpublished letters along with a drawing by Olaf that was inspired by the same material.

A PROBLEM MORE SAD

I find this subject scandalous. Far of me the idea that these disabled persons are not human. No, I say only that you show them like you'll show ruins of a prehistorical animal than some searcher would discovered after millions and millions after their death. No, you mustn't show these men as particular persons. They are human and they have right at consideration and human respects.

Everybody laughs then they see fat men on photos: if people does it; they'll do the same thing seeing your photos in your magazine. All who's not straight or normal as our society want it, all is socking and must be censored. I wish you'll not remake photos like these, because these trunked, small, desarticulated, etc....are proud to be alive and their proud do they act like human. Many of Americans like horror shows. But French respect mutilated persons.

A French Lover of
Virile Men

THE UNSPEAKABLE KINK

Mark I. Chester's "Maimed Beauty," Michael Agreave's "Other Bodies," and George Dureau's photographs in Drummer 93 may be the best features Drummer has ever published. The erotic lives of physically challenged gays remains largely a subject we'd like to keep in the closet. And the strong sexual attraction some able-bodied men feel for their disabled brothers is our best-kept erotic secret, the unspeakable kink.

In discussing the sexuality of handicapped gays, ironies take center stage. In the eyes of the het world, all gays—be they the "straight-acting-and-appearing" fags so over-(self-)promoted in classified ads, or blind-mute amputees—are handicapped, deformed, disabled, revolting creatures. And the conventional wisdom continues to hold that all homosexual sex acts—from vanilla to the sublime—are nasty, dirty and shameful. ("Only if you're doing them right," some of us counter.) [Editor's note—as does Witomski's paraphrase of Woody Allen in Take the Money and Run.]

"The love that dare not speak its name," one was written, "now won't shut up." But as Chester so correctly observed, "We are a white-bread society. Homogeneity reigns. Even our images of men into leather, rough sex and SM are narrow. Their bodies are the stuff of sexual fantasy—pumped up and glistening with oil. Tightly muscled or fleshy. Two from column A and one from column B. And please, nothing unusual. No huskies. Nor someone with glasses, let alone someone without an arm or in a wheelchair. It might ruin the fantasy."

What makes nonvanilla sex (what I'd like to think of as "alternative sexuality") so exciting is the sense it brings to its partisans of being members in a secret society. Being gay in itself no longer carries a sufficient "sinful" kink. There's no such thing as "the gay community," rather, there are gay communities, the most dramatic, the most vital and the most politically important of which is brotherhood of those into "alternative sexuality," commonly called leathermen or SMers, though membership isn't dependent upon leather and/or SM. This group looks at the world and at themselves in a way that's both violent and indirect, seeing in the politics of radical sexuality a way both into and out of the restraints of the established social order.

But even in this forward-thinking set, there often exists a belief that there is some sort of line you do not cross. Yet this line is precisely the line that must be crossed if radical sex can continue to have any meaning.

Chester's and Agreave's articles and Dureau's photographs take us very far indeed: they practically define "the different drummer" many of us march to. I hope these features are harbingers of the next ninety-three issues of Drummer. The purpose of our magazine is not to reiterate stale ideas and tired images, but to boldly go where no magazine has gone before.

T.R. Witomski

ON THE EDGE

"Maimed Beauty" cuts to the core of the power to transform, the radical magic of desire enacted in SM, fetish and obsession. The story of the man with polio who tied his bottoms in the configuration of his own body and took them into his world in that way, touched me. The power to turn it around, to create pleasure and transcend limitations—stump into fuck-piston or bludgeon, scars into sites of worship, "victim" into Master—that's what moved me as I read it. And the combined fascination, turn-on, respect and vulnerability shared in those pages helped me to look at different bodies in a new way.

I looked, really looked, at the photos by George Dureau. And they are beautiful. We've been taught to look away from dwarfs, people who limp, amputees and people in wheelchairs; not just not to stare, but not to look, and to prize and desire a narrow range of physical possibility. The work in Drummer 93 opens up more space for the appreciation of different and altered (intentionally or otherwise) bodies.

Thank you, and please continue to offer work that takes risks.

BREAKING STEREOTYPES

I am a monthly reader of Drummer. I am also an SM woman who, although more heterosexual than bi, loves to bottom out to gay men, top straight men and go both ways with women. So you see, breaking some stereotypes seems natural for me. I want to compliment you on taking risks in Drummer 93 with the articles "Maimed Beauty" and "Other Bodies." Thank you for helping us to expand our vision of radical sexuality. We need to share together and stay together in these particularly difficult and dark times.

CATASTROPHIC INCONVENIENCES

Congratulations on "Maimed Beauty." I am pleased that at last someone has put into print what I have lived with all my life.

I am not one of them, but I have always been greatly interested in those whom I call the "inconvenienced," and I have been closely acquainted with many of them. I have worked with cerebral palsied, quadraplegics and others with similarly catastrophic inconveniences. I have had business and social amputee and polio friends, people with anything from a missing hand to both legs missing at the hips. All these people have beautiful souls. Most of them have some wonderful insight. They seem to share a secret the rest of us know nothing about. I love them.

When I was about twelve, I was "adopted" by an amputee and his wife. It was at a time when I desperately needed a father. The amputee supplied the image. Some years later, the experience was repeated, by yet another amputee and his wife and again at a time when I really needed help.

I can honestly say that none of these people was "handicapped." Inconvenienced, yes, and sometimes very painfully, but handicapped, no. Very few were gay. Two of the severely inconvenienced polio men were gay and two of the amputees may have been. If any of the others were, I was certainly unaware of it. I congratulate the editors for printing above the photos: "do not assume they are gay."

I am curious to know if it creates a similar reaction from other people. Of course it is quite possible that few, if any, will ever hear about the article or would have heard about Dureau's book. Again, thank you.

TURNED ON

I read your "Maimed Beauty" and saw those photos by George Dureau and really got turned on. I'd like to see and learn more about these hot amps, etc. I wrote to Para-Amps and am waiting. Also can you tell me more about the dude on page 11, cut almost at the waist. Does he have or can he use his cock? His ass? Seems like it would be on the ground. Dig seeing him in the nude. He's hot for a session.

PUSHING LIMITS

I am a pansexual leatherwoman in San Francisco who's been reading Drummer for seven years and I'd like to make a comment about "Maimed Beauty." I appreciate Drummer's courage in doing something that pushes the limits of acceptance and is on the edge.

And while we're on the topic of the unusual, why not go one step further. How about an article on infantilism and SM and leather? For some people, they go very well together. For example, a scene could include diapers and enemas, and I know that there are SM daddies out there into enemas.

THE KID'S FIRST TIME WITH DAD PART 1

The kid's been bad (chicks and drugs) but Dad knows just how to handle him. Dad shows his son who's boss and gives him the punishment he deserves. It's a horny kid's introduction into the male world of cocksucking, armpits, piss and, most of all, hot, masculine attitude.

THE KID'S FIRST TIME WITH DAD PART 2

Dad's been waiting for the right opportunity to corrupt his oversexed boy and tonight's the night. He knows he shouldn't do it, but those hot ass cheeks and adolescent cock are too tempting.

THE DADDY TAPES

© STALLION SOUND PROD.
Box 436, Canal St. Station, N.Y., N.Y. 10013

MY DADDY WAS BAD

The kid comes home to find his dad asleep after a hard day's work. He could stand there forever at the foot of the bed, rubbing his crotch and watching his dad's hairy chest, meaty thighs and swollen dick. But when Dad wakes up, matters come to a head and the kid gets taken on a wild sex trip that culminates in a super-hot scene.

KID VS DAD— WINNER TAKES ALL

Ever wrestle with your old man? Ever wonder what would happen if those sessions got Dad hot—too hot—and he overpowered you? Ever wonder about all the different things he could force you to do to that sweaty body of his before he pins you on your stomach and forces that horse-dick of his up your ass? It's all on this tape!

rites and Raunch

There was definitely something evil about the guy, maybe that's why I went home with him. But nothing prepared me for what was to come. I admit the things he lead me into were pretty sick, but he was so sure of himself, so masculine—well, I did them. Warning: Don't order this tape unless you're prepared to listen in on some really perverted stuff—devil worship, toilet sex in a filthy bathroom. Male bonding at its most extreme.

BIKE EXHIBITIONIST

Imagine: it's a steamy afternoon at the local truck stop and you see a biker who looks too good to be true—mean, dirty, muscular—leaning against his big, black Harley. You ask if he's interested in getting some pictures of his bike. But back in your garage his massive chest, his big, hairy ass, piss streaming out of that dick... It turns out he's quite an exhibitionist. But things get out of hand when he forces you to do more than take pictures. In a short time you know that stinking body better than your Polaroid does.

MARINES OVERHEARD

Two hot and very horny young Marines meet in the barracks latrine. Richie has to take a piss... and Mike takes things from there. If you're a real pig... if you like your action raunchy—hot military scenes, uniforms, the feel of a cold tile floor against your naked back while a hot Marine squats on your face—then we think you might be interested in Marines Overheard.

HOT HUNG TRUCKER

Teamster Bob picks up a not-so-innocent hitchhiker at a truckstop in the California desert. Bob has a kink in his neck... Jake the hitchhiker suggests a massage. Bob's leather jacket is the first thing to come off—then his dirty, greasy jeans. When they drop to the floor of the cab, you'll find out how this tape got its name. Jake knows just what to do to service that big rig. And you'll feel like you're right there to help him out.

MUSCLE BUILDER ORGY

Five hot bodybuilders, after a sweaty workout... stripping down to sweat-drenched jockstraps... eyeing each other... their hands reaching out to feel their buddies' biceps, brushing against these solid, hard pecs... and down, down still further 'til they get so hot they don't give a shit who walks in. If you get off on pumped-up muscle, hot man-to-man action, steamy lockerroom sex with no holds barred, then this tape is for you.

DELIVERY BOY COMES AGAIN

Richie is the new driver on the route. He's a hot, straight Italian guy who seems a little "curious" when he finds himself delivering beer and soda to a gay bar. The bartender jumps at the opportunity; soon he convinces Richie to pull out his dick and show it off. "I gotta piss," Richie announces so the bartender hands him an empty beer can. A hot session follows that gets into heavy cocksucking, lots of dirty talk, more piss games and kinky exhibitionism.

AL PARKER AS THE REPAIRMAN

Porn star Al Parker in his only audio tape. Al's an air conditioner repairman who drops in on a guy who's wife isn't home. Who could resist Al's enormous cock? Sucking that mammoth piece of meat isn't enough and pretty soon the guy's begging for it up his ass. He gets it too—plus Al's giant balls at the same time, in one of the hottest and kinkiest scenes ever recorded.

TAPE 1 THE INTERROGATION

This tape is featured on the cover of Drummer magazine. Model Brutus is a mean Master who knows how to deliver some heavy abuse, both physical and mental. On side one he talks directly to you, forcing you to suck his big cock and worship that incredible Master body. On side two we hear an authentic session where he works over a slave. Plenty of humiliation, and heavy, heavy abuse.

TAPE 2 THE TRAINING BEGINS

Brutus lays it on as his recruit responds willingly and unwillingly to the abuse and humiliation of his training. Not even allowed to beg, he submits to the DI's heavy hand and busy belt. Breathtaking!

TAPE 3 PUNISHMENT & REWARD

When Brutus speaks, men listen, as will you when he tells you how it is and how it is going to be. Whether the punishment is its own reward, or the reward is merely more punishment, only the lowly recruit can say. One hour of intense verbal abuse.

THE COMMANDER SPEAKS

"I am your big brother, your daddy, your commanding officer. I am every big man you ever saw in your whole fuckin' life and started beating off about...your tongue is going to be my shower...your mouth is going to be my toilet...you're going to make me feel like the biggest man in the world, just 'cause you got a throat. Get your teeth down there on that zipper...get down. That's it—get your face in there. Smell what a man is like between his legs." This is just the start of the verbal abuse and humiliation.

THE CONFESSIONAL—A young priest hears the confession of his first gay man and what happens in the booth would do much toward conversions.

THE HIGHWAY PATROLMAN—He stops a speeder on the road and there are more ways for paying for speeding.

THE HITCHHIKER—An air corpsman is picked up by a trucker who is looking for more than a passenger to share his ride.

THE HUSTLER—He sets the price for a blow job but discovers that the price includes a good deal more.

THE WARDEN—The young convict learns that time was not all he is giving up when he enters the joint.

THE INFERNO: THE SM ANNUAL EXPERIENCE—Its values and what it is about.

THE MASTER—Frank O'Rourke discusses the role of the Master.

THE SLAVE—Frank O'Rourke gives an insight to the slave and/or masochist.

TOYS: SOME OF THEIR USAGES AND POSSIBLE DANGERS

MASTER MARIO: "GREASE MONKEYS"

GREASE MONKEYS STARRING MASTER MARIO

Two sweaty garage mechanics rape a guy they find hanging around the men's room. He puts up a fight, at first, anyway. Lots of axle grease, cocksucking, filthy talk.

DADDY BREAKS IN A NEW BOY

Patience and understanding go out the window and Daddy starts training his boy with the tried-and-true adage, "spare the rod and spoil the boy." It is heavy-duty training in an actual session. Both the boy and you will be better for having been there.

THE D.I. STARRING MASTER MARIO

Authentic military discipline as a tough Drill Instructor takes advantage of a couple of guys in the brig. Packed with heavy verbal abuse and forced body worship as the D.I. proves who's in command.

THE COP STARRING MASTER MARIO

A mean police officer forces a suspect to service his body in a show of brute, perverted force. Climaxed by a raunchy bathroom scene and the victim cleaning out the cop's dirty ass.

COP WORSHIP

We've never offered a strictly one-man narrative tape before, but this one is so good we decided to make an exception. It's one guy's cop fantasies, his true-life obsessions, his dreams of what might happen if that super-hot cop he's had his eye on for months should bust him, force him to his knees to suck not only his cock but his partner's too, as the two cops stare at each other in the eye. All the guy's pent-up desires come out: slurping cop cum out of rubbers, swallowing gallons of cop piss, wallowing under dominant cop attitude. If you're into cops, you'll listen to this tape again and again.

THE LEATHER NOTEBOOK

by Larry Townsend

Dear Larry,

I am very interested in piercing, although I don't think I'd ever have the nerve to actually get one. And I don't live where it would be a good idea to have a piercing, since I go to a public gym for workouts. But I really used to enjoy the articles by a guy named Doug Malloy. They were in quite a few different publications a couple of years back, and then suddenly nothing. Can you tell me if Doug is still writing anything and, if so, where I can find them?

Name Withheld, Ames, IA

Dear Withheld,

Doug was a friend of mine and I greatly admired him both as a person and as an expert in his field. Unfortunately, he passed away two or three years ago from a sudden and unexpected heart attack. His surviving partner now runs Gauntlet Enterprises, which publishes a quarterly called P.F.I. You might drop him a line at: PO Box 69811, West Hollywood, CA 90069.

Dear Larry,

There seems to be a continuing trend away from having things "natural" and this bothers me. For instance, I really like the odor of a man's body, but every time I meet a guy who turns me on (if I'm successful in getting him into the sack) I discover a body that smells of soap and deodorant, and sometimes even (ugh!) cologne. I also flip out on the smell and taste of a cock that hasn't been scrubbed clean after a normal day's sweat and whatever. I don't mean that I'm into anything really filthy and stinking, but just that a nice, male odor that builds up in a day or two of being left alone. I don't think I'm weird in this, because I've talked to a lot of guys who agree with me. But still, most of them shower and spray their armpits before they go out cruising, because they're afraid they'll smell bad. I'd appreciate your comments.

J.K., Salt Lake City

Dear J.K.,

I hear you, and to some extent agree with you. But you're seeking a rather fine line between that "just-right" smell and the two alternatives on either side of it: pristine cleanliness vs. raunch. I'm sure you'd find plenty of takers for either, plus a goodly number who would rather have you fresh and soapy-smelling than otherwise. It really boils down to the problem of the one-night stand, doesn't it? If you've never made it with the guy before—maybe haven't even met him until you get together to do it—you (or he) cannot anticipate his unknown partner's preferences when he prepares himself for his night of hunting. If you make a date for a return engagement, that's the time to try setting the stage (or crotch) for your ultimate desire. Otherwise it's a matter of being safe rather than sorry, since a majority of our brothers like 'em clean. (Proctor and Gamble must hate you!)

Dear Larry,

I read somewhere that you are against sex with animals. I'd like to know why. Is it for health reasons, or is it ethics?

Chuck, Baltimore

Dear Chuck,

Although Our Heavenly Mother certainly knows that I am no moralist, this is one area of sexual behavior toward which I have very strong negative feelings. I really can't give you a completely logical reason for this, because it's a matter of personal prejudice. (The nice thing about prejudice, of course, is that it doesn't require a rational basis.) I really love animals. At the moment I have two Doberpersons, a Dachshund and a Siamese cat. But to have sex with any of them would be (to me) on a par with molesting a child. I simply couldn't do it. Nor do I like to think of other people doing it with their animals. I know they do, and they enjoy it—and the animals apparently enjoy it. I don't think there is any particular health problem, nor do I find it "disgusting" in the sense of being appalled by raunch or slime. So I guess I'd have to answer your question by saying that for me it is a matter of ethics.

Dear Larry,

People are always sending you questions about medical things, and you have to go research the answers with doctors. But in the long run, I think most of us encounter day-to-day problems that are more in your own line, psychology. I'd like to know what there is in the "average man's" makeup that causes him to hate gays. I moved to San Francisco to get away from the shit I had to take in my home town (in Iowa), only to find that it isn't safe to walk on the streets at night, because there are gangs of teenaged punks out there "fag bashing." I know I was passed over for promotion in my job because the boss knew (suspected) I was gay, and just the other day my lover and I were in a good restaurant, properly dressed and not camping it up, when I overheard a man tell the waiter he didn't want his family seated next to "queers." I should think that if there is any place in the world where a gay man can live his own lifestyle in peace it would be in San Francisco, but even here they dump on us!

Outraged, San Francisco

Dear Outraged,

As I noted in one of my answers, above, the nice thing about prejudice is that it requires no logical basis. It's a condition from which all of us suffer to one degree or another, whether these feelings are directed toward people on the basis of age, sex, color, religion, behavior or whatever. And everyone is the recipient of prejudice in some form or other. No one's immune. We are one of the more popular targets, unfortunately. Telling you that some men hate us because we remind them of their own sexual inadequacies doesn't take the sting out of the overheard remarks, or lessen the pain and injury from their physical assaults. On the other hand, I have asked waiters not to seat me at a table near a family with obstreperous kids. Prejudice can cut both ways—and does. We all need to feel superior to someone, and we all have what they call "social distance" from one or another group. I don't say it's right, and don't say we shouldn't be trying to do something about it. But you didn't ask me how to fight back, merely why it happened.

Dear Larry,

As somewhat of a local activist, I would like to alert you to a telephone campaign we are attempting to organize. As you probably know, 7-Eleven Stores just recently decided to discontinue selling Playboy and other "sexually oriented" publications. Because we consider an attack on one to be an attack on all, we are trying to get as many people as we can to call in and protest this action. The most potent response, of course, is to boycott the chain and to tell them you're going to do this when you call. The toll-free number of their head office is: 800-255-0711. Let's try to show the Immoral Minority that we can fight with our dollars, too.

Al, Los Angeles

Dear Al,

Good idea. I've passed it along.

(If you would like to have Larry Townsend address a particular problem or issue, you can write him via Leather Notebook, Drummer, PO Box 42009, San Francisco, CA 94142-2009.)

BOUND FOR GLORY

The Torturers of Rhengfel Part VI by MASON POWELL

Gonar leaned against the sharp rocks and closed his eyes, his breath coming hard after the long climb, the sweat pouring down his thickly muscled chest. Every possible joint and tendon was in pain, but he was at the top. The Rhengfel Wall was not impassible. Chala had been right in assuming that a single warrior might get up it; and if the impassible wall was a myth, then other stories might also prove untrue. Gonar might yet be able to rescue his Master, Chom.

The blazing light of noon pierced his eyelids and made his head ache. The climb up the high and crumbling cliff had been the most difficult exertion he had ever known; but there was no time to rest. The City of Torturers devoured victims quickly. Unless he hurried, he might arrive in Rhengfel to find Chom pierced by a thousand tiny knives or hanging over a fire, flayed alive.

He opened his eyes to the glare and peered cautiously over the ridge of rotting stone to which he clung, down into the valley at the center of which was the evil city itself.

Rhengfel, the city, was the color of blood, built of some dark stone like garnets in decay. It was walled about with red stone and its towers and keeps and temples were of red stone also. In a perverse way, it was like a rose, for its streets were laid out in circles around the huge arena where its "amusements" took place. The architecture was the strangest Gonar had ever seen, both fanciful and leaden at the same time. High turrets leaped skywards; but flying buttresses grasped them and chained them to the ground. Rows of spacious windows fronted facades, but the windows were bound with bars. It was all like a great, scarlet palace: and like a bloody prison. It was appropriate to a tribe that wrote its name in blood, spoke its name with terror.

In the surrounding valley there were no dwellings, but Gonar could see camps where slaves in chains were kept to till the fields. Rhengfel had to eat: its farmers did not.

Gonar checked the war belt at his waist to be sure nothing had fallen from it during his ascent. He had taken the belt from the corpse of one of the falcon-masked riders of Rhengfel, one of the men who had tortured him and Chom and Fillian before Chala had led an attack on the horse train to free them. It now held a sword, a length of rope, a dagger, a small pouch with some rations and several vials of drugs whose nature he did not know, but whose effects he guessed at. It had taken hours to throw off the effects of the last drug which the falcon masks had given him: lying on the ground in the wreckage of the cage, naked to the mountain cold.

He had been very lucky to escape with his life. One of the horses bearing the cage had broken its neck during the tumble down the hill. The other had run away, the arrow in its flank making it useless for warfare, even for riding. When he had recovered enough to walk he had gone back to the site of the battle, hoping against hope that Chala's attack had been a success; but there had been nothing to see. Dead men, both falcon masks and the short, shaggy folk who had followed Chala and the scarlet banner, but nothing to tell him who had won. That neither Chala nor Fillian was among the dead gave him hope. That the tracks showed a retreat up the side of the valley, a followed retreat, dimmed that hope. Only the tracks of the advance unit, the one bearing the cage with Chom, were clear. Whatever else had happened, Chom was headed for Rhengfel. And whatever else might happen, to Fillian, to Chala, to Prince Hrendel, whom they had set out to rescue, Gonar knew that his first concern was to rescue Chom.

He wished that he had kept the tunic and the breeches and the greaves, but he had cast them aside as too much a burden for his assault on the rocky cliff. Now he was reduced to a leather loincloth and the war belt, and that was that. The sun would have its way with him.

He assayed the stone face below him, gauged the best route down, then slid over and started the slow descent.

He was in plain view of anyone who might choose to look up. His only hope was that the falcon masks had more to amuse them than watching the wall. Certainly there were slaves to be whipped, peons to manage, and a thousand other things to occupy their time. Yet they were a warrior people, and the security of their valley was of prime importance. The Rhengfel Wall, that high and rocky barrier that legend said was impassible, was a good defense. It was breached by only one narrow pass. But would they trust to it? If Gonar was now crawling down its face, had not some previous invader done the same, alerted them to the chance?

The sun crept across the sky and cast its beams like arrows into Gonar's straining muscles. As he sweated and stretched, as his fingers were cut and bruised, as his eyes ached with looking for a purchase on the treacherous rock, he felt the flesh of his back and shoulders tighten with heightening sunburn. He knew that the pain he felt now was nothing compared with what he would feel later, when the heat had soaked into his body and ravaged the tissues beneath his skin. It was as if he were being racked under the sun of a barren desert; but he kept on climbing, stopping only now and then to look over the evil landscape, ever wary for enemy warriors.

It was evening before he reached the lower part of the wall. Suddenly the stone was a little less steep. He felt vines beneath his feet, reaching up like fearful fingers clawing at escape. He rested for a moment, looked down at the rank growth below him, then clambered down and jumped.

He squatted in the brush, panting, stretching his arms and relaxing them. He leaned to the side and stretched first one leg, then the other. After a few moments his heart slowed, then his breathing. He felt drained. He reached into the little pouch at his belt and pulled out some dried rabbit meat, stuffed it into his mouth and chewed. The saltiness of it flooded his mouth, made him aware how thirsty he was.

He raised himself carefully, listened intently, then threw his gaze like a net over the nearby terrain. It was not far to where the scrub growth gave way to fields of grain (an impossible way to travel, as his passage could be easily detected), but along the cliff a jagged growth of gorse gave evidence of water, perhaps the outflow of a spring from the rock. He headed for it on his hands and knees and in a short while found a small pool.

He was lying on his face, drinking from it, when a voice behind him said: "Don't move! I have arrows aimed at your body. Not where they will kill you, but at targets that will cripple."

Gonar froze.

"Continue to drink," the voice said after a moment. "You will need the water."

Gonar tried to keep his muscles loose. There was no sense giving them any reason to shoot. If he was captured there would be time enough for pain. He drank until he was full, then said: "I am finished. What will you have me do now?"

"Put your hands behind you and lie still."

Gonar did as he was told. There was a crackling sound as booted feet crushed twigs, then he felt a leather thong wrapped around his wrists, tightened, and he was bound. A moment later another thong fastened his ankles.

"Now drink more water," the voice said.

He hesitated. Why did they want him to drink more? Was the spring poisoned? Did it contain some substance like the drugs they had given him?

He hesitated too long. The air whirled and a leathern lash landed across his raw and sunburned back. He stiffened and cried out.

"Drink!" the voice commanded.

Gonar put his mouth to the water and drank again, sucking in the sweet liquid and wondering how long he could make the act of drinking last. There had to be a way of escape!

When he could hold no more he slowed and took a breath. The lash whirled down again and he felt the swollen skin break.

"Drink!"

Gonar had never considered that drinking clear water could be a nightmare, but now it was. He drank and drank again, filled his belly to where it felt as if it would burst, but they were never satisfied. When he slowed the whip and the command spurred him on. His belly bloated, he choked on the water and his back felt like a steak over coals. They whipped him and he drank, and now the water came back as soon as he drank it. He puked it into the pool and they forced him to drink it again. He wondered if this were some special way they had of killing a man. Could one die of drinking water? Would there come a point where he choked to death? Was that what they wanted?

Finally the voice said: "Enough!"

He was yanked to his feet and made to stand, tottering because his ankles were bound together and his bloodied back muscles could not balance him.

There were six men in a circle around him. They were covered in black leather, their faces covered by leathern falcon masks. Each had a whip in hand, a long whip of braided leather with a braided handle. Who had delivered the blows he could not tell. Perhaps they had taken turns. If so, they had wiped the blood away.

One came forward and unfastened the war belt, then handed it to another. He cut the cord of Gonar's loincloth and pulled that off as well. He took Gonar's big balls in his hand and hefted them, then started squeezing them hard.

"This one will provide much amusement!" the man laughed.

Gonar closed his eyes against the pain, but he would not cry out. He had endured this much before, many times. . . In fact, it was beginning to stimulate him, and as the pain increased, his big, thick cock stiffened quickly.

An amused murmur of appreciation went around the circle, and the falcon mask's other, gloved hand seized Gonar's prick and began to stroke it, pulling it so that the foreskin covered the head completely, then pushing so that the head was exposed and stretched, like a shiny, purple apricot. The waves of pleasure began to supersede the pain, and under the falcon mask's skilled stimulation, Gonar felt himself approaching orgasm.

"Give me a binder," the man said, still stroking.

One of the other men handed over a small, leather-bound rod, to which were attached two lengths of thong. As Gonar began to tremble with approaching release, he laid it across the top of Gonar's dick, halfway up the shaft. He wrapped the thongs around the cock twice, fastening it in place tightly. He stopped stroking and pinched the head of Gonar's cock. Gonar's knees shook. He was going to cum.

The man put his hand under Gonar's cock, brought two fingers up on either side of it and held onto the rod. Then, with his other hand, he began to bend Gonar's prick upward and backward, forcing the head toward Gonar's belly.

The explosion hovered, tried to force its way out, but it could not as the big prick was bent in half over the rod. Gonar moaned. He started to struggle, to pull away so that his load could shoot. Two men grabbed his arms and held him upright as his dick was forced double and the dangling thongs were brought up and over and around, binding his dick tightly back on itself, over the rod.

His body tried to defend itself by withdrawing blood from the engorged organ, but the torturer was too quick. He wrapped the thongs quickly around the root, then drew them tight, trapping the blood in the bent prick as tightly as meat is trapped in a sausage.

The gloved hand reached again for Gonar's balls, but this time it did not squeeze, it only fondled. After a moment it came away shiny with the sweat that now poured from Gonar's body.

"Get a horse!"

They brought a brown horse and they untied Gonar's feet. They hoisted him up on the animal's bare back, then they bound his feet under its belly, tightly, so that he could not use his legs to lift himself. They ran a rope around his chest, then around the horse's neck, pulling him down so that his chest was against its neck. He could not fall off, could not fall to the side. He knew what would come next. No matter what he did, each move of the horse would lift him up and down. And his own weight would land full on his balls and on his bent and bound cock.

They laughed as they mounted their horses. One took a lead rope from the horse on which Gonar was tied, then they headed off at a cantor.

The pain was immediate and awful. With each move the horse made his balls were crushed. The pain in his bent dick was nothing compared to that. The pain of his sunburned and whipped back was meaningless. Nothing that a man can endure is so awful as to have his balls crushed repeatedly and hard.

But as they went on another pain invaded. Even as Gonar vomited with the pain in his balls, the water they had made him drink worked its way into his bladder; so while his nuts were being cracked under his own weight, his bladder filled inexorably, and he could not (with his cock so tightly bound) piss.

He only realized that he was screaming when he wondered where the screaming came from: a terrible, dull screaming, an ululation as the horse bounced him along. He wished desperately for his mind to slip away, but it would not. When he thought that it was about to, one of the riders would bring a whip down across his bleeding back.

He found himself wishing for death when the horse finally stopped. He was only aware of the pain when they cut the thongs around his ankles, pulled the rope from around his chest, and let him fall off the horse onto the ground. He felt it dimly when one man slipped arms under his armpits and another grabbed his feet, and they carried him somewhere. At least his balls were no longer receiving a pounding. His bladder ached as if a knife had been driven into it.

They laid him on cold stone and his ankles were bound again. His eyes focused for a moment on a heavy rope, then his legs were pulled up, his ass, his body and he was hanging upside down. A crotch appeared next to his face, encased in leather. He smelled leather and sweat and crotch, then the binding on his cock was undone roughly.

His dick straightened, stiffened painfully, and another kind of knife edge slipped into him as his bladder emptied itself, the stream of hot piss shooting down his belly, across his chest, splashing onto his face.

The pain of release was enough to send him into darkness.

There was a time of smoky dreams during which Gonar felt that what was happening to him was really happening to someone else. Everything was at a distance, the way things happen in a fever. He was whipped and he was fucked in the ass repeatedly by men whose faces were not there. He was kept in chains and darkness and fed huge amounts of red meat, raw and still warm from the kill. He was strapped, spread eagle, to some large piece of decorative furniture in what might have been a palace. Blindfolded, he was serviced by countless cocksuckers. When there was nothing left for them to suck, when he failed to respond, they shoved hot needles into his legs and feet. Somewhere along the way they put the head of his cock on a wooden block and drove a small, hot spike through the side of it. Then they put a gold ring through the hole and melted the gold so that the ring was continuous and unbroken. After it healed, a chain was attached to the ring, long and thin and strong, and the other end of the chain was fixed to a stone wall: so that his hands and feet were free to perform other services.

What the smoke was that always drifted through the air he could not tell; nor did he question it. It kept the horror at bay and he was glad for it. . . . Only in some of the smoke dreams he thought he saw Chom: and Chom was not bound, nor in slavery, but riding free through green fields, in sunlight.

It came as a shock to him one day (while he was eating raw and bloody meat) that the smoke was gone, and that his mind was clear. He had grown so used to thoughts like wisps of fog that reason, clear and unfettered, seemed alien. For a moment his hands trembled and he thought that he would leap up and run around; or perhaps sit still and cry. But he was in his cell, there was a plate of gore before him, he was chained by his prick to the wall. Reason was not a welcome gift. It was an added torture.

Later one of the falcon masks came into the room, accompanied by four others with drawn swords. He unlocked the end of the chain from the wall and led Gonar by it out the door and down a long corridor. Gonar went docilely, but as he went he wondered how long he had been this way: how long had he followed on a lead, complacent like an animal? It seemed there was no reason for him to act otherwise. With the smoke gone he had to face the prospect that Chom was either dead or . . .

A glimmer of something flashed in his heart. It was possible that Chom was still alive: somewhere in Rhengfel, enslaved as he was. . . . Or . . .

But no, the dreams of Chom on horseback and free had certainly been the effect of the smoke.

He must have paused for a moment in thought, for the man leading him tugged harshly on the chain and yanked his prick painfully. Gonar speeded up.

They went down a long hall with stone walls, then turned and went down another exactly like it. There were occasional doors but they were shut. They climbed a narrow stairway, then went down another hall. There were torches in brackets to light their way and their shadows danced on the walls like dark goblins. Two of the goblins were connected by a shadow umbilical cord. They went up another stair and emerged in a hallway with painted walls, though the red pigment was old and flaking.

It occurred to Gonar to wonder where they were taking him. His memories were too hazy to remember other such journeys, though there must have been such. He tried to marshall his thoughts, to make himself think once again like a man instead of an animal. If Chom were alive, there was every reason for him to think like a man. He must remember that, force his mind to think about more than food and sleep.

They passed through a bronze gate guarded by two more falcon masks, then through a curtained area into what appeared to be an armory. Gonar noted weapons in stacks, but also an open door that connected the armory to a room where off-duty riders lounged without their headgear, one even stripped. It struck him as odd for a moment that under the black leather and the falcon mask there must be a man. In their uniforms they seemed invulnerable. Without the leathers: why, the naked man was not even well hung!

Now they moved into the palace itself, or so it seemed to Gonar. The walls were all dark red marble, and he had the feeling he had been in the place before. On some of the marble walls there were painted scenes of torture, painted with such artifice that they seemed to float there as on the surface of a lake of blood. There was much use of gold and silver leaf: here a man crucified against a blood-red cloud, there a man tied with golden ropes to a silver-red tree, his bowels strung out before him as he watched them burn.

Gonar thought to himself that the black leather might conceal the bodies of human men, but not the souls. To be amused by pain was one thing; to live for it, to live enveloped by it, was another.

They passed through several empty chambers and came at length into one that was occupied. At the far end, where light from high-barred windows fell across him, a falconman reclined on a pile of lime-green pillows. He was of much the same appearance as the others, save that his leathers and falcon mask were gilded, and the falcon eyes set with pieces of lapis lazuli and turquoise.

Next to the man who reclined stood another falcon mask, but this one wore a loose, blue robe over his black leathers. This one spoke, and Gonar felt his heart freeze: for the voice was Chom's!

"You see, my King, even this barbarian had been brought to docility with my methods. You remember how he fought when first you saw him? How difficult he was to subdue? Now observe him! He is as quiet and tractable as any dancing girl."

The golden falcon settled back and gestured absently with his hand.

"I see what you have done, but I question whether it is so much worthwhile. We have made slaves docile in this city for a hundred years, with the whip. This method of yours is efficient, but far less amusing."

"I must agree with that, my King," laughed the man with Chom's voice. "But forget not that slaves bound to docility with the whip do not last long enough for our purposes. Rhengfel grows and prospers, but as it does so it must have more food. The fields grow not half so well as the city, and we must go further afield each year in search of both slaves and foodstuffs to supplement our dwindling supply. If we can make the slaves in the fields work with less food, and keep them healthy, we can economize their needs while supplying ours. . . . And they will, in the end, provide the same amusements. Perhaps a better show if they have not already been weakened by the lash."

"Ah," said the King irritably, "but if they are so docile, where is the show? Can they still fight after they have breathed this smoke of yours? Will they still scream as they die, or will they die meekly like that crop who worshiped the Dying God?"

"Why, that is the purpose of today's demonstration, Oh Golden One," said Chom's voice. "That is why I have brought this one here to you. You see how readily he obeys. In a moment I shall put him in the pit with your Minotaur, and you shall see what manner of amusement he can offer!"

Gonar stood uncomprehending. His mind raced, fighting off the long effects of the smoke. The voice was Chom's, yet it spoke with the inflection of Rhengfel: and it spoke as if he, Gonar, were a stranger, an object of experiment. Was it then not Chom who stood before him? He looked closely at the body robed in blue and clothed in leather. Indeed, it looked like Chom under the disguise. But if it were, what was happening?

The King sighed and gestured once again with his hand.

"Very well! Show me. But it had best be amusing as well as instructive, for I have not forgotten that you, Tilesian, were brought here only a little while before this barbarian; and should you fail me I will be pleased to see what sport you provide!"

The King laughed, and Gonar thought it the most callous laugh he had ever heard. In fact, he thought, he would like to cut that laugh out of the King's throat with a dull stone dagger... But at least the matter of Chom's presence was somewhat clarified: if it was Chom.

The guard who'd led Gonar in unfastened the chain from the ring through his cock head, then retreated. Chom walked directly up to Gonar and stared straight into his eyes: and now Gonar had no doubt, for there were no other eyes like those black eyes of Chom's. Two polished lumps of coal that peered deep into his soul.

"Barbarian, listen to me and listen to me well. The creature you are going to fight is the Minotaur. He is a thing with the body of a man and the head of a bull. He has one other attribute of a bull as well, and that is his prick. It is very large, and the Minotaur will be desirous of using it on you for he has no mate. The only way you can escape being raped by the monster is to fight him to a standstill. To bring him to exhaustion. He is dangerous! His muscles are the muscles of the strongest of heroes. He has horns on his head that are long and sharp. You cannot win against him, but you may be able to make it a draw. Do you understand?"

"Do you understand me? This is a matter of your life, Barbarian!"

Gonar understood. Whatever was going on, he must not give the game away. Instinctively, he knew that it was a matter of both their lives. He nodded.

"Good!" said Chom, and he returned to his place next to the King. "Let it begin!"

The floor fell away under Gonar and he plummeted downward, a distance twice the height of a tall man. He landed on soft, loamy soil, so the shock was not great. As he climbed to his feet he looked up, and there, to either side of the trap door through which he'd fallen, stood Chom and the King, looking down.

A slow, grinding noise drew his attention downward, to the wall of the chamber opposite where he stood. A large, bronze grating was rising inexorably into the ceiling, and beyond it showed the black mouth of a tunnel. He listened intently as the movement of the gate stopped.

In the darkness there was a short, sharp sniffing. Then a snort, and then a thumping, such as animals make when they paw the ground. He looked around quickly for a weapon but there was nothing. The chamber was carved out of the living rock. There was not even a handhold by which he might climb.

The Minotaur stepped into the light, and Gonar felt his knees grow weak.

It was indeed like a man, as Chom had said. It had the body of the most superb man Gonar had ever seen. Every muscle was perfectly delineated, yet bulging, massive with power. Arms, chest, thighs, all were like stone columns, monuments to masculine strength. The muscles shone with a fine sweat. There was no hair on the body, except at the crotch and armpits—not on the man's body.

But halfway down the calves the man's body changed and instead of feet there were hooves. And where a beard might have sprouted, low on the throat, a thick mat of smooth, brown hair grew, and above that there was the head of a bull.

Below the creature's thick waist, in the curly brown tangle of its pubic bush, its cock grew. Grew even as Gonar watched, above its massive ballocks. Not really so big as a bull's endowment, but big enough to strike fear, its purple head sliding wetly from the concealment of a thick and hairy foreskin.

Gonar licked his lips.

The Minotaur's cock continued to grow. Bigger and bigger, it curved up toward the monster's belly.

How big could it get?

Gonar caught the scent of the beast on the air. The smell was half that of a man, half that of an animal; but there was something else as well, a musky something he could not identify.

The monster prick reached full erection. Gonar knew he could not circle it with his fist, knew it was longer than his forearm. It would be worse than being fisted if the thing got him. It would rip him asunder.

The Minotaur moved toward him, a stalk rather than a walk. Like a great musclebound wrestler. It raised its arms and clenched its fists, making the arms bulge, ripple. Then it extended its fingers, twitching, ready to grapple with him.

In the strength of the creature there might be weakness, Gonar thought. If it was slow to respond as a human wrestler of similar build, then he just might be able to exhaust it before it could take him. He bent his knees and assumed the crouching position that a wrestler would use before a grapple, but he had no intention of letting the creature actually get a hold on him.

As soon as the Minotaur moved, Gonar moved. His speed was not like lightning, but like an eel. He shot under the monster's outstretched arms and as he shot by he threw a backward kick to the inside of the creature's knee.

If he had kicked a man like that the kneecap would have fractured; but the Minotaur only went down. Yet in that moment Gonar was on him from behind, grabbing hold of the horns and twisting, the way one bulldogged a cow for branding.

But the Minotaur was not a cow. A powerful arm reached up and wrapped around Gonar's chest. He found the muscles of his back and sides constricted, cramping. His grip on the horns weakened. In a moment he lost control and his leverage disappeared. The Minotaur pulled and Gonar was thrown over the creature's body, to land flat on his back.

He tried to roll away but the thing grabbed his ankle and, holding on, climbed to its knees. Gonar kicked at its arm with his free leg, but the creature grabbed that too. With its powerful arms it pushed Gonar's legs apart, so that he could not use the strength of them.

Gonar pulled himself up with his belly muscles and punched the creature hard on the snout.

The Minotaur grunted with the force of the blow but its grip was unaffected. It kept on climbing to its knees, all the way, then it forced Gonar's legs upward toward his chest.

Gonar squirmed backward, pulling himself with his arms and hands on the loamy soil.

The Minotaur climbed ponderously to its feet and lifted Gonar by his legs. It was much taller than he was, and suddenly he was helpless, a rag doll in the thing's grasp. The monster shook him, like a length of rope, so violently that it almost broke his back. Then Gonar felt his shoulders on the ground, and a hoof pressing down on his arm at the shoulder, just enough to keep him from moving backward.

The Minotaur spread Gonar's legs, then forced him down on his back, his asshole exposed. Gonar felt stark terror as the creature moved its hips, positioned the huge tool against his hole, an entry far too small for it ever to pass. It started to push, pulling on his thighs, forcing him, upside down, onto the huge shaft. Gonar felt his hole try to stretch.

"No!" Gonar screamed, but the Minotaur ignored him.

"Your man has lost already," the King said above.

"That is unfortunate," Chom's calm voice replied. "I had planned to give him to the lizards at the next amusement. Now it appears that I will have to wait until the ripping of his hole heals somewhat. He would die much too quickly after this."

Gonar began to scream mindlessly as he felt the ring of his asshole tear. The pain was searing and terrible, but his mind was well trained to escape such pain. A bizarre ecstasy took him as the Minotaur forced his huge weapon deeper and deeper into his bowel. He felt his cock as hard as the Minotaur's.

"Wouldn't it be simpler to just give him to the lizards and begin to experiment with a new slave?" the King asked.

"It might," said Chom, noncommittally. "But where would I find one so pretty to destroy? Such men are not common among our captives."

"Indeed!" agreed the King. "Save for this one and yourself, there have been none of such stature. I thank you for calling that to my attention. My sense of poetry demands then that when you eventually do fail me, you shall be treated exactly as you have treated him. I look forward to seeing you raped by my Minotaur, Tilesian. And I will relish it greatly when you are raped and eaten by the giant lizards. They have been among the most difficult animals to train to that task, so they deserve some special meat!"

Gonar screamed in absolute agony as the Minotaur finally got his whole, huge cock all the way into him and began to fuck him, harshly, brutally. The pressure on his interior organs was beyond bearing and the pain was so terrible that Gonar barely noticed it when his own cock shot gobs of hot cum out over his face, into his open mouth as he screamed.

And even when he fainted, the Minotaur kept fucking him.

Afterward, the pain of the rape was unbearable. They kept his cell filled with smoke and he was fed soft things that would pass his bowels easily. There was a peculiar old chiurgeon whom they had captured in a mountain pass and who knew much strange medicine, both the herbal and the magical kind. He came each day to treat Gonar with such simples as he felt effective, and after a while Gonar knew that he would live, if only to endure more.

When the old man felt he was no longer needed they set a boy to keeping Gonar's care, a lad of fifteen who had been a slave in Rhengfel since he was nine. He washed Gonar's body, fed him, and rubbed ointments into Gonar's anus with remarkable skill.

Gonar was sure that he was going to live when the boy's ministrations began to excite him. The feeling of the young fingers sliding in and out, rubbing the tingling ointment all around, began to be unbearably delicious, despite the pain. One day when the boy was finished with the treatment Gonar rolled over on his back and let his erection spring up full and hard.

The boy, whose name was Ketis, smiled.

"You are better," Ketis said, his youthful voice sounding pleased. "Would you like me to treat that affliction for you as well?"

He looked at Gonar's cock meaningfully.

Ketis had red hair, long over the ears and cropped across the back. His face was round and his skin was like cream with freckles, a sure sign that he was kept as an indoor slave. His eyes were bright blue, he had a small nose and a small mouth. His naked body (for all the slaves were kept naked) was well proportioned for a lad his age, showing that they worked him to that purpose. His uncut cock still hung limp.

"What treatment would you give?" Gonar asked.

"Many different, if the condition persists," said Ketis. "I have not only ointments for healing but ointments for pleasure, and even some for pain. There are many tastes in Rhengfel."

"And what would be the result of your treatment?" Gonar asked, smiling at the boy's confidence.

"You would hold on to the walls and scream for my mercy," Ketis laughed. "Yet you would not move to stop me though you be unbound. At the end you would burst like the flume of a great whale in the ocean, and then you would sink beneath the waves of the pleasure I gave you."

"Can I endure such ravages, do you think?" Gonar asked, a little sarcastically. The boy was not just confident, he was cocksure.

"You will endure," said Ketis. "But I warn you that I am very good, and in the end you may become doubly a slave: mine as well as the King's!"

Though still not well, Gonar could hardly let a boy of fifteen so challenge him.

"Then do it!" Gonar said, nodding toward his hard member. "Let me feel this skill of which you boast so much!"

The boy grinned, then suddenly moved forward and fastened his mouth on Gonar's cock. His tongue darted inside the foreskin, around the head, then began to play with the little gold ring that pierced the head. The moment Gonar felt he could control the sensation the boy changed technique, sucking the whole shaft into his mouth, taking the thing deep into his throat. His small hand slid between Gonar's thighs and he grasped Gonar's balls, squeezing them just to the point of slight pain but no further.

Gonar, having lain abed for so long, gasped with the pleasure of it.

Ketis turned and climbed up on the bed, spreading his legs over Gonar's chest so that his balls, his now-hard young cock (and it was not small), and his tight pink asshole were right in front of Gonar's face. As he sucked on Gonar's cock his balls swung back and forth, his dick bobbed and his ass cheeks flexed, making the small, pink eye of his hole contract and dilate in the same rhythm as the sucking.

Gonar groaned, then reached up and began to run his big hands over the boy's body. Across the smooth chest, along the sides, over the back (already thick with young muscles) and eventually down the rippling belly muscles to the patch of red pubic hair out of which sprang the cock. Gonar took the boy's prick in his hand and stroked it, pumping it, squeezing it.

Ketis reached over to a small table near the bed and picked up a little jar. He took off the lid while he continued to suck, then Gonar felt one of the heralded ointments being smeared on his balls. In a moment they began to tingle, to warm, and he was reminded of the fiery oil that Chom had used on him that day so long ago in the arena, though this stuff only warmed. Ketis reached back and smeared some of it on Gonar's nipples, and the result was the same warmth.

Gonar lifted his head, bent the boy's cock backward with his hand, then took the young, pink organ into his mouth. Ketis pushed, suddenly, hard, and the whole shaft went into Gonar's throat, almost making him gag. Ketis sucked faster, harder, tonguing the head of Gonar's dick fiercely.

The tingling in Gonar's balls began to spread. His thighs, his belly, began to feel the same kind of sensations that his cock and balls were feeling. The sensitivity of his tits was now a hundred times what it had been before. He moved his hand to his chest and began to play with them as he sucked Ketis. He started to wish that Ketis had three more mouths with which to suck on his tits and his balls as well as his dick. He started to twist and to moan with the intensity of what was happening to him.

Ketis pulled his cock out of Gonar's mouth and took his own mouth off Gonar's cock.

"No, go on!" Gonar commanded.

"Only if you do what I tell you!" said Ketis, and his voice was as playful as a kitten, as sharp as the crack of a whip.

"What?" Gonar asked.

"Tongue my asshole!"

Gonar grabbed the boy's hips and pulled them down, forcing the pink pucker to his mouth. He licked furiously at it, then shoved his tongue forcefully into the hole. Ketis' mouth swallowed his dick in one long slide.

Gonar felt the explosion building in his gut, knew that at any moment he would erupt into the slave boy's mouth. But he didn't like being quite so much in the control of anyone (at least anyone who was not Chom) and he especially didn't like being in control of a mere child slave; so he held back, fought to keep his orgasm under control.

He wrapped his thumb and forefinger around Ketis' cock and balls like a ring and started slowly squeezing while he rammed his tongue deeper and deeper into the boy's tight ass. If Ketis could make him beg, then perhaps he should turn the tables!

Ketis sucked harder, jabbing his head down fast, now straight, now at angles. He bit lightly, he tongued, but Gonar held out. It had started as sex, but now it was a battle.

Ketis reached for Gonar's balls, tried to grab hold of them as Gonar had his. But Gonar took his other hand and grabbed the reaching arm, twisted it backward, behind the boy, then lifted his powerful legs to lock them around Ketis' neck, hold the hot little mouth all the way down on his organ.

Ketis struggled but he was no match for even an invalid Gonar. The big dick was firmly down the boy's throat and Gonar was raping Ketis' asshole with his tongue. Ketis squirmed now the way he had made Gonar squirm. He tried to cry out, but Gonar's huge member so filled his mouth that he could barely breathe.

Gonar pulled his tongue out of Ketis' asshole and said: "Now who is in charge?"

He didn't allow a reply but shoved his tongue back in again. Ketis grunted, thrashed, tried to wrest himself free, but it was no use. Finally Gonar took his tongue out of the boy's asshole, licked his way up past the tightened balls and sucked Ketis' hard dick into his mouth.

He tongued the head, he nibbled it, he did all the things to Ketis that Ketis had done to him. Then he did a few new things.

Ketis stiffened, shook, then shot his load into Gonar's mouth. Shot after shot, big gobs of soapy semen spurting with all the force of horny youth. Gonar smiled to himself as he sucked the boy harder and harder, ran his tongue roughly over the tender cockhead, made Ketis jerk and scream as best he could with the big dick firmly down his throat.

When the shots of cum were replaced with shots of piss Gonar knew he'd won. He pulled his mouth away, turned his face from the flow of urine the boy let fly and chuckled. Then he started pumping his hips, fucking Ketis' captive face for all he was worth. The load he'd been holding back was quick to build, then burst, shooting into the boy's throat with all the force of Gonar's bound frustrations: a huge, choking load.

When he finished he loosened his legs and let Ketis climb from the bed, coughing, sweating and no longer smiling that cocksure smile. The boy stood for a moment, not sure what to do: so Gonar told him.

"Your treatment worked, Ketis. I think you have made a new man of me. But I suspect I will need a few more of your treatments before I'm really back in shape. See that you are prepared for more when you return."

Gonar smiled his most winning smile, letting the boy know who was boss (at least in bed), but also making sure that Ketis felt strong enough to accept the implied challenge. It was only when the boy was gone that Gonar found time to wonder if this, perhaps, were a test of his ability to be put back in service.

And now, after the orgasm, he was suddenly weak. Too weak to fight with anything but his self-assurance. He laid down and fell quickly asleep.

Ketis came to him again, and later, others. He found his every sexual appetite gratified and his every physical need fulfilled. It was obvious that they were training him for something very special: perhaps the lizards Chom had mentioned?

He still couldn't understand what Chom was up to. He had not seen his Master since the day he'd been given to the Minotaur, but Chom's situation was clear. He had somehow got himself into the King's graces as an advisor on "amusements" and his position was secure only so long as the King was amused. Chom had always been imaginative, so it was no surprise that he was able to supply what the King wanted. Yet how had he learned the Rhengfel accent so perfectly? Gonar realized that there were a great many things about his Master he still did not know, and that both worried him and gave him confidence.

Gonar didn't believe for a moment that Chom would sacrifice him in order to save his own skin. That was not Chom's way. But as time dragged on he wondered if there were any way out for either of them. The King had made clear that the end, for both of them, was death by torture. It was only a question of time.

They fed Gonar on raw meat and full-bodied wines, and they introduced him to many new sexual excitements. So many that he lost count. They trained him to respond over and over, so that he was shooting his load ten to fifteen times a day. They took him to a gymnasium and made him lift weights, do stretching exercises, and in general, they put his already magnificent body into the best shape it had ever known. Had it not been for the ominous quality of his future and his concern for Chom, Gonar would have accounted it not a bad life.

Then, with no notice, the day came.

He thought that he was on the way to the gymnasium, but he knew the route and when it changed direction he was alerted that something new was in store. At first he assumed it was a new training; but there was that about the manner of the falcon mask who led him, still by a long chain attached to the ring through his dick head, that something was perilously different.

He slowed his breathing, forcefully calmed his nerves. He would need all his intelligence if this was to be his end. To die was common. To die well was a triumph. To die well under these circumstances would be heroic; but he would prefer not to die.

He was led through a long tunnel, dank and moist with the smell of fear. How many other men had been led down the tunnel he could not imagine, but the red stone of the walls held the aura of their passage. As the heavy door at the other end of the tunnel grew closer he could hear a tumult without, the familiar surge of a crowd, the cheering and screaming... But there was another screaming than that of the crowd, less loud and of a very different quality. Gonar shuddered as he realized that on the other side of the door people were dying in pain.

The falcon masks stopped and stood, as if awaiting some signal. Gonar wondered idly what he would face. He tried to put his mind in the frame of reference of a Shegrin, tried to view what was to happen as just another body bet. But it was not the same, and he could not delude himself. On the other side of the door was Death, whether for him or for others it did not matter. What he was to face was qualitatively different. Here was the same evil that had crept into Jhent in the guise of Dworkrimian. It mattered not what the clothing was, beneath the mask was still the skull.

A blare of brass music came through the door. It jarred somehow. Gonar had not imagined the falcon masks liking music, even the discordant sounds that now played without.

The music stopped, and the lesser screaming, of death, was gone. Another fanfare and there was a knock on the door before him.

Two powerfully built slaves came in from a side door. Both had been castrated. They annointed Gonar's body from pots of oil, making him shine. The stuff they put on him had an unpleasant smell, a mustiness that he faintly recognized. The door opened and a tall, castrated slave with black hair took the end of the chain by which he was led. He was drawn through the door and out into the arena at the center of Rhengfel.

It was a large arena, floored with sand and the sun beat down fiercely. There were wooden stakes in the sand at various places, and both the stakes and the sand were wet with blood, denoting the previous "amusement." Gonar was led to the center, then the chain was undone from the ring in his cock and the eunuch retreated, leaving Gonar alone. He looked around.

Tier after tier of stone benches seated the populace of Rhengfel. All the men wore falcon masks, their bodies clothed in black leather. The women were also decked out as birds of prey, but their bodies were covered in outre garments made of feathers: as were their headdresses. It was a gorgeous, gawdy display, far too beautiful to conceal so many wicked hearts, Gonar thought.

The music brayed again and Gonar's attention was called to the Royal box at one side. There sat the King, the Golden Falcon, surrounded by an honor guard of black falcons. Next to him was a creature who must surely be the Queen. She was feathered like a white owl and the eyes of her mask were two huge sapphires. Down at the front of the box Chom stood in his blue robe. He beckoned to Gonar to come toward them. Gonar did so.

"I see, Barbarian, that you are well recovered from your last trial," Chom said. "It is well. I also am told by my servants that you have been trained to perfection for today's sport. That is most well, for today you shall be privileged to provide what I hope will be the finest show His Majesty has ever seen. You may even find favor in the eyes of the Queen."

At this statement Chom turned and bowed to the White Owl, a gesture which told Gonar more about the governance of Rhengfel than anything he had yet heard. He remembered the stories told about the Queen just after his first capture.

"When you were brought to me," Chom said, turning back, "I saw that you were the most splendid specimen of a man that I had ever beheld. I envisioned how you might look in hundreds of different battles, and from that list of visions I chose the one I thought best. Today, well prepared, you shall fight that dream."

From the folds of his blue robe Chom drew a cloth bag.

"To do my vision justice, I have brought you the very things you wore and carried when you came into this valley. Here! Attire yourself!"

He tossed the bag onto the sand in front of Gonar.

"I wish the King and Queen to see you just as you were when you climbed down the Great Wall to challenge the strength of mighty Rhengfel!"

A murmur went up from the crowd at the revelation of Gonar's climbing over the wall, but Gonar ignored it. He stooped to open the bag and draw forth the things that Chom had said would be in it. His leathern loincloth, his war belt, his sword, his dagger, the little bag with drugs; even the small parcel of dried foods. The length of rope was there as well.

Whatever might transpire, Chom had found a way to give him familiar weapons with which to defend himself.

"And now, Barbarian," said Chom gaily, "we will toast the amusement you are about to give us!"

Gonar looked up and saw that Ketis was in the Royal box, bringing out a portable brazier on which a large, bronze pot steamed. The boy poured some hot liquid into goblets, first for the Queen, then the King, then Chom. Finally he filled a fourth goblet which had cords attached, and this one was lowered over the edge of the box and down to Gonar.

The Queen stood and Gonar heard her voice, a dark and beautiful voice that dripped poison.

"To pain, to joy and to death!" she pledged, and they all drank.

The stuff was spicy, and almost immediately Gonar felt it flowing into his bloodstream. It was like fluid anger he thought. The goblet was drawn up out of his hand, Ketis took all the goblets on a tray and with the brazier exited the box.

Abruptly the King stood up and stepped down next to Chom. "You have done well for me, Lord of Amusements," the Golden Falcon said, and Gonar saw Chom go stiff. "I will now reward you! Guards! Help the Tilesian with the privilege of amusing us still further!"

Chom did not struggle as the guards seized him and there, in the Royal box, stripped him naked, taking from him the falcon mask emblems of manhood in Rhengfel. They tied his wrists together, then lifted him over the edge and lowered him into the arena as the crowd hooted and jeered with delight. When he touched the sand they dropped the rope, and Chom met Gonar's gaze with a grim smile.

"Now," said the King, "let the barbarian who has suffered so much at your hands show us the effects of all your training. Barbarian! I want you to fuck the Tilesian! I want you to fuck him until he screams the way you screamed when the Minotaur fucked you. I want you to fuck him with the full knowledge that this is the last time you will ever fuck anyone or anything. . . . For know this: when you have finished with him I shall have the lizards released, just as he planned. They are trained to rape first. To hold you with their sharp claws while they slide their huge, cold cocks into you. But when they have finished that, they are trained to rip you open with their claws and and slide their huge, cold cocks into your warm vitals, to fuck your entrails as you live, again and again until you are dead. Only when the lizards are glutted with their rut will they tear you apart with their sharp teeth and eat you!"

The King reared back and laughed, as if he had just told the world's most monstrously good joke. Then he gestured and commanded: "Go ahead! Fuck him!"

Gonar looked at Chom's handsome face, not knowing what to do.

Chom smiled at him and nodded ever so slightly, his black eyes intense. If he had been a stranger, Gonar would not have understood; but they had been lovers now for some time, and he knew how to take orders from his Master almost unbidden. Chom was telling him to do it. There was more to the situation than met the eye.

Gonar rushed at Chom with a yell that he hoped would convey ferocity. It was born of the hatred he now felt for Rhengfel, but no matter. Let them think it was for Chom.

Chom dodged him and ran for the center of the arena. Gonar pursued, gaining, then he was close enough for a dive that brought Chom down. Chom was working at the rope around his wrists, but Gonar was able to throw him onto his face and pin him to the sand.

"This has to be real!" Chom whispered through clenched teeth as he struggled against Gonar's weight. "Listen carefully, but in the end let me escape you for the moment. You must rape me in front of the King's box. Make it as hard and brutal as you can. That will buy us time. They have to think that you've screwed me to exhaustion. Then they'll turn loose the lizards. We have a sword and a dagger between us. We should be able to kill one of the lizards that way. The other one can be slowed by throwing the potion in the blue bottle into his eyes. After that. . ."

Chom surged and Gonar was thrown off. Chom tumbled, turned, then he had Gonar in a hammerlock, forcing him down on the sand. He bit hard into the muscle of Gonar's shoulder and shoved his big, suddenly hardening cock against Gonar's ass. The crowd roared approval.

"If we get the lizards, there will be help. Don't ask how or why, just be ready!"

Chom loosed his grip ever so slightly and Gonar seized the advantage. He threw Chom off and scampered away, then turned and leaped into a crouch. But Chom turned tail and ran toward the Royal box again. The crowd jeered and threw things. Gonar ran after him.

Chom got to the sand in front of the Royal box and fell to his knees, throwing up his arms in the gesture of pleading for mercy.

"Your Majesty, have mercy on one who has served you well!" he cried, and he even made it sound as if he had hope.

Gonar ran up behind him, grabbed him, threw him face down in the bloody sand and fell upon him. The danger was great now, but it was Chom, his Master, whose body was beneath him. He reached down and ripped away the leathern loincloth, and his cock was hard and ready. The training they had given him made him ready at any time. He shoved his big dick between Chom's hard buttocks, probing for the hole.

Chom resisted, fought him.

Gonar wrapped his arm around Chom's neck and pulled back, as if he planned to break the neck. Chom groaned, then the tightness of his ass loosened and Gonar pushed his big, hard tool against the wall. Chom yelled. Gonar shoved, hard, felt his cock slide in deep.

"Fuck him! Fuck him!" the King roared, and the crowd roared with the King, setting up a mighty chant:

"Fuck him! Fuck him!"

Gonar rammed his prick all the way in, making Chom cry out with pain and secret pleasure. He pulled back, rammed in again. He drew it almost all the way out, then shoved with enough force that Chom screamed.

Now Gonar began to fuck in earnest, hard and fast, as brutally as he could. This was what Chom had said to do. This was what the King had said to do. This was what Gonar wanted to do! Even if he died, he would give Chom his best animal fucking.

Harder and harder he fucked, with all the new-found strength the training had given him. Deeper and deeper, a little bit more with each savage thrust. He knew that he was supposed to buy time, but suddenly that thought was at the back of his mind. The feeling in his cock took over, the raging storm that thundered for release behind his bludgeoning prick. Harder and harder, all the rage of his unwilling slavery fighting for release. He barely heard Chom's voice over the chant of the crowd, over the blood in his ears.

"No, no, not yet! Please!"

But it was on him, the explosion, the volcano, the hot, white lava surging its way up the channel of his dick, up to the head, bursting out in unbearable gobs into Chom's tight ass. He heard his own voice roaring out of his throat the way his cum roared out of his prick. Everything was a storm, a red storm. The crowd was thundering its approval.

But the King's voice cut through the red haze like lightning: "Now! The lizards! Turn loose the lizards!"

It was only a momentary weakness that took him, but it was enough for Chom to throw him off, grab the dagger from his war belt, and cut the rope that bound his wrists. It was also enough time for the first lizard to arrive, and the second. Gonar felt claws sink into his shoulders, felt the cold weight of the thing on his back as it pinned him, grasped his legs with its clawed hind feet and pushed its huge, cold penis into his unprepared asshole.

Gonar screamed, awareness washing over him with the wave of pain that came as his anus was once again split by an enormous penetration. The cold thing slid in and out of him, horrible, loathsome, alien to his body and his soul. . . And with a terrible clarity he saw ahead of him the other lizard leap and topple Chom, grapple with him, use its clawed feet to try and turn him over.

Gonar watched through pain as Death, in the form of grey, scaly horror manipulated his Master like a rag doll. Chom was strong, but no human could match such a lizard. Its long, red tongue licked out to touch Chom's face, its sharp teeth showed as it opened its huge mouth.

Then light flashed near the lizard's belly where Chom held the dagger, and the lizard hissed, scampering backward, but too late. Blood gouted from the gash, all over Chom, in a trail as the lizard retreated.

The monster fucking Gonar stopped its pumping and paused. Then the huge, cold cock slid out and the thing stood up on its hind legs and roared. Gonar rolled over, looked straight up at it, horror and pain paralyzing him. Was it angered by what had happened to the other lizard or excited by the smell of blood?

The lizard stepped toward him, still on its hind feet, its fore-claw clutching. Gonar rolled aside just as it stepped again. On its hind legs, manlike, it was moving toward Chom.

"The vial!" Chom yelled. "The blue vial!"

Suddenly the lizard was moving faster, faster than anything so big had a right to move. Gonar fumbled at the little pouch, found the blue vial. He pulled the stopper, breaking the wax seal, and climbed to his feet, but the lizard was almost upon Chom, and without the element of surprise a mere dagger would be useless. Feeling the blood trickle from his ripped ass, Gonar yelled at the lizard and started to run toward it, his head swimming with pain.

Chom backed away, dodged in the direction of the Royal box. The lizard dodged after him. Gonar caught up with the creature, saw it bend, reach with its claws for Chom. Gonar kicked the lizard on its haunch, kicked it again, desperate to get its attention.

The lizard turned, its weak mind distracted. Gonar staggered forward and threw the contents of the bottle first at one great eye, then the other. Then he turned and tried to run.

But he was weak, his bowels bloody. He stumbled and fell.

There was a scream from the Royal box. Reflexively Gonar looked up. The Queen, the evil White Owl, was in flames. Ketis held the portable brazier for only a second, then hurled the empty vessel at the King. The King swept it aside and lunged at the naked boy.

But Ketis, though naked and a slave, was younger and swifter than the gold-encrusted King. He grabbed the reaching hands of the Golden Falcon, hurled himself backward, and the two of them together toppled over the edge of the Royal box and down into the arena.

Behind Gonar the lizard roared.

Gonar rolled over and saw it clutch its claws to where smoke rose from burning eye sockets.

"Save the King!" Chom's voice cried out in the stunned silence as the crowd held its breath.

Then the Queen began screaming as the flames got through her feathers and she tried to tear them off. The Royal guards began shouting, trying to help the Queen, confused by a multiplicity of emergencies.

Chom ran forward and dragged Ketis away from the stunned heap of the King, still yelling at the top of his lungs for someone to save the King. He threw the boy over his shoulder, then waved for Gonar to follow him. Gonar, responding at last to the will of his true Master, staggered to his feet, ignoring the pain, and tottered after Chom.

In the wall of the arena a door opened and slaves poured out, followed by falcon-masked men in black.

"Save the King!" Chom continued to shout, pointing excitedly to where the King now scrambled to his feet, in close and apparent proximity to the enraged and blinded lizard.

Gonar ceased to wonder, ceased to do anything but follow his Master across the arena. He did not wonder at the way the guards at the door let them pass, then shut and bolted the door. He did not wonder why the guards followed them quietly down the dark tunnel. It was all he could do to keep moving. He did not even wonder when one of the falcon masks put an arm around him to support him as he went.

Later Gonar did notice his surroundings. He noticed that Ketis was helping the falcon mask support him. He noticed that they were moving through a long cave, their way lighted by torches. He noticed that he was in a crowd. Falcon masks, slaves, eunuchs. There were two women of rank, dressed as birds. The old chiurgion was with them.

The cave got smaller and branched in several different directions. They took a passage that curved to the right and downward. The air grew warmer and the torches fluttered in a breeze. Someone who walked up ahead, next to Chom, told them to douse all but one of the torches.

After a while Chom came back to walk beside him and talk. "I am sorry, Gonar, my Gonar, for all the things that you have had to endure, but it was the only way to keep you alive. I had to play the King against the Queen or you would have been castrated and dead long ago. That city is a labyrinth of evil, and it was no easy task to threat my way through it. Yet I found good there as well. These people with whom we walk. The old man who attended you, the chiurgion, this boy Ketis. Over there, Chala's lost brother, Chebid. Alas, we were too late to save him from the knife and Chala will have no nephews. There is also the old man who now leads us. He was once a priest of Wa-at, the Volcano god, before the days of blood sacrifice. He knows the old ways, through these tunnels, and he will lead us to the ancient temples that are no longer known. We will be able to get around the crater from those temples, for the new priests in Rhengfel fear the god more than they worship him. We therefore have hope of escape."

"Will the King not have us pursued?" Gonar asked.

Chom shook his head.

"He will try, if he has escaped the lizard. But the ways we took were secret. I do not think he can."

Chom stopped walking and signaled Ketis and the falcon mask to do the same. Then he put his arms around Gonar. The heat of the cavern was now great, and they all sweated profusely. Chom clasped Gonar to him and the slipperiness of their bodies was like the aftermath of lovemaking. He put his lips to Gonar's and Gonar felt his Master's tongue slide into his mouth, search, ravage, then withdraw in promise.

"Tonight we will sleep in the old temples in the walls of the volcano. Tomorrow we will complete our escape. After that we will plot the war against Rhengfel."

Chom kissed him lightly again, then ran his hands down his slippery sides, slid them between his legs, fondled his balls and his cock. For a moment Gonar thought he would make love to him, then and there. But Chom stepped away, touched his face lightly with one hand, then hurried again to the front of the line. Gonar shut his eyes for a moment, knowing that everything was all right, knowing that they were back together again.

"Can you walk again?" asked Ketis, beside him.

Gonar opened his eyes and looked at the boy: saw bright blue eyes twinkling in torchlight, mussed red hair, dirt and sweat dripping down his body. Suddenly, his heart was torn with the memory of Fillian. He realized that he did not know how long it had been since they had been separated. Was Fillian still alive? Was Chala?

For that matter, was Prince Hrendel still alive, far away in the clutches of the Dwork?

The quest had gone awry.

"Yes, I can walk," Gonar said. But he knew that he needed Ketis' support. Knew more certainly that the only thing keeping him going was his love for his Master, Chom. He put one foot forward, then the other. He hoped Ketis had brought his ointments.

He did not want to wake on the morrow to plot a war. □

YES, MASTER

by Kenn
Richie

"Yes, Master."

"Yeah, that's good, slug. Those two words. Baby? From this point on those are the words. Those are the only two words you know, those are the only two words in the language if you want to survive around here. Is that clear to you? You got that into your feeble brain?!"

"Yes, Master."

"Alright. Yeah, that's alright. Where do you want to go?"

I gave it a moment, curious to know if he'd make the obvious slip, or if he was really ready enough to boil up a session, and anxious enough to be careful. He was naked and ached to get at the bed, but we were still in the living room and I was setting the rules. I was in a mood to boil it up, it was a mood that could promise a good explosion. I wanted to play. I needed a good game played for real, and the game was Simon Says. "Well? What do you want from me, pig?!"

"Yes, Master."

"Okay! Well, what do you know about that, the little snorter scored a point! The little shit's on his toes—on his belly where he belongs. You hear that, turd? You just managed to impress me with something. You proud of that? Huh? You think you really scored big with that? Huh?"

"Yes, Master."

"Awww, but that blows it. The last thing I want around here is a piece of slime that thinks it's something. Ego I don't need. Who ever heard of a slave with an ego? You hear what I called you? Well, I didn't call you that, but I said 'slave.' That means the time could come when I could call you my slave, baby. You'd love that. Don't you just wish! You'd like to be my slave, right?"

"Yes, Master."

"Well, you're not. I only called you that to give you a thrill. I'm letting on that I'm thinking I might... just might try to lift your disgusting-looking butt up the social ladder a little bit. A man has a little respect for his slave. That's where you're missing out. Being a slave is like being a piece of furniture. A man doesn't piss on his furniture."

"Yes, Master."

"You'd love that, wouldn't you? Oh, yeah, sure you would. If I had to piss and if I didn't feel like getting up to go to the can, I might consider it. I'll let you think about that."

"Yes, Master."

"Shit, but you're ugly. You could make a man want to piss. Maybe if it was like into snow, and I could write something with it. I could write 'I am a garden slug' across your face so everybody'd know where you crawl around. God knows, it'd improve your looks. You're too ugly to make even slug class. Maybe that was a little mean of me to let you even think you might make it to slave. Some things just ain't possible. Aww, I dunno'. Maybe some sort of dumb animal class. I could call you something like that but, shit, I hate to insult a poor cow or pig."

"Yes, Master."

"You got me in a good mood, though. How lucky can you get, huh? I'm in the mood, and you've been behaving yourself. Almost, anyway. Dreams can come true when the conditions are right. It's like magic time. You could even get to my cock, you know that? Huh? Oh, that idea has you going! Hah! You'd give anything for that, right? Right?"

I think he was too excited to make a sound.

"Answer me!!!"

"Yes, Master."

"Awww, look how mean I can be. Letting slime like you think you could get to my cock? Letting slime like you think you could do some service to earn your right to exist on this planet? Shit, I'd really have to be in a mood to consider it. But, I guess I'm in a mood. Yeah, maybe I am. If you've got any kind of organs in your sack of garbage you call a body, I'll let your heart start going with that much. I just might let you take care of my cock. Hey! What's that you see in my pants, slug? Something making them bulge like that. Hooo, hooo... that gets you hot. What is it, huh? The fuckin' dream of a lifetime to something like you, right? And, just to keep you goin', I'll tell you you're close. Close enough to think you just might get a taste of it, if you don't make any mistakes. What does that do to you, slime ball?!"

"Yes, Master."

"Ha! Careful as hell. I like that. Careful as a diamond cutter, right? Ha! Careful as a worthless, no good, ugly, sniveling little bug worried about getting stepped on. Worried, hell. Hoping for it. If I stepped on you it'd be the thrill of your life, right?"

"Yes, Master."

I was getting the beginnings of a good hard-on, but I didn't want him to know it. Not quite yet. There was a force going on inside me, in my thoughts and my guts that was making it hard to try to keep it down in my pants. That mood. I'd started boiling toward this session when I walked into the house. He'd been right there waiting for me with a message he'd learned word-for-word. I'd hurried home to meet Roger, a human-being-type friend, and I didn't like being told that something else had come up, that he wasn't going to meet me and that he'd see me later. The mood started when that pissed me off. I could never stay sore at Roger for more than one or two seconds. In fact, it was damn near impossible to feel things like anger toward...

"Yes, Master."

"You shut up!! You don't speak unless I want you to. You lost points with that one, slime."

About Roger... Aww, I was a little miffed, that's all. I guess I didn't have any real cause to get sore at this... thing, just because he repeated the message. So? Roger couldn't make it. No big deal! But, the way this slug, this creepy, whimpering turd seemed to enjoy giving me Roger's message? It was as if he was laughing at me behind every word of it. That's the stuff moods are made of. "You told me what Roger said? Word for word? Exactly?!"

"Yes, Master."

I knew he had. He was good about details like that. I couldn't blame him, but damn it, there was that moment of anger and it had to be stored some place! I put it in my balls and it started stirring things up in there. As long as I let a little anger churn things up in my balls and my cock, I could get horny from it. "You'd love to see my cock right now, wouldn't you, turd?"

"Yes, Master."

It wasn't as eager nor as excited a reply as I might have wanted, but it was good enough under the circumstances. He might have told me how much he'd like to see it if I hadn't allowed him only those two words. Yeah, that's how this came about. I'd put a moment of annoyance into my balls and let it stir things up. Now it was starting to want to get out. There's only one sure way I know of to get the stuff out of your balls. The mood was there.

"Yes, Master."

"I didn't ask you! I'm thinking about it, turd. I'm actually thinking about it. You just might get your big, lucky-day thrill. What do you have to say to that?"

"Yes, Master."

It was my Simon Says game, so I couldn't fault him for playing it well. One slip, however, and he'd be in deep trouble. Not only wouldn't he win his prize, but he'd need a lot more punishment than just disappointment about that. One slip and I'd have a good excuse to bash his insides out. One slip and I might even kill him.

"Yes, Master."

"You want it bad. But, shit, you're not worthy of it! You're so far below being worthy of touching my cock, I'm having to feel downright ashamed of myself for even thinking of letting you do it. I don't like to feel that way, slime. If you were a slave, maybe. I could let a slave service me. But you? You're not good enough to be a slave. You know what it takes to earn that title?"

"Yes, Master."

"Alright! Okay, you filth. You want a chance at that?! Okay, so maybe you've got it. Let's just see what you can take, baby. Huh? Maybe you can take it. Into the bedroom! I said, get your ass in there!!"

I gave him a hard, full-booted kick that sent him across the floor and virtually spinning to a place near the foot of the bed.

The kick was hard enough that I had to give some thought of how I might have broken something. Ribs have been known to shatter with lesser field goal punts than that.

"Yes, Master."

He was still going. He was okay. If he was still going, so was I. I was beginning to feel nicely boiled up. My pants were stretching. That anger in my balls had done its work—they were good and full of it now. It was getting near time to flush the cum out of them. He took that kick okay. He'd been working damned hard to obey the rules of the game. He was on his way to reward.

"Yes, Master."

"You shut up, baby. You just lie there on the floor and think of yourself as the fuckin' dirt you are. Room needs sweeping, baby. There's a shit pile of dirt on this floor. Make a note of that. Sweep up in here. Damp mop. Damp mop with your tongue."

"Yes, Master."

"Not now! Fuck!! I just told you to lie there, and you don't move! Shit! In a weak moment I'm thinking I could lower myself to give you the fuckin' thrill of your lifetime, and you want to lick the floor?! I might even let you suck on my cock, and you think about putting dirt in your mouth?!"

"Yes, Master."

"Stupid, baby. Real stupid. Damn, but you're such filth. You're disgusting. I'm really stretching myself to be getting a little bit of a hard-on for you. You're not worthy of even looking at it! You don't move!!"

"Yes, Master."

I sat on the edge of the bed a good distance from him and went for the boots. "Ahhh, you'd love to, wouldn't you? Well, you won't. Kiss and lick these boots? You? You clean the dog shit off the soles of these? Shit, you aren't worthy of that, slime. You aren't good enough to touch them. Besides, these belong to Roger. I only borrowed them. If he wants his slave to clean them, that's up to him. I'm not about to let a whiny little bastard like you anywhere near them. Roger's slave is the only one with a tongue that has any right to get on these."

"Yes, Master."

It was a thought that led to a reminder that I wouldn't be playing this way if Roger had been here to meet me. We'd have gone to a movie, maybe. We'd have gone out somewhere. Roger was... hell, I dunno. Maybe I was a little jealous of him. He treated his slave real good. He knew how to keep a slave. Damn, maybe I was jealous of the fact that he had a slave to keep, one who was always ready to jump if Roger said jump, and get a whipping if the jump wasn't good enough... or a good fucking if it was. Shit. This trash on the floor wasn't even worthy of Roger's slave, let alone to lick his boots."

"Yes, Master."

"I must be crazy, but I'm thinking it might be possible to train you. It'd be a hell of a job to whip you into shape. Your guts get hot. I like that. I can damn near hear those guts of yours churning away when you get hot. That's nice. A good slave has to have that. Maybe it's possible, I dunno. Maybe I could go to all the effort. Like, maybe I'm going to lower myself and give you a thrill, just because I happen to feel like I could use getting some stuff off my balls. Don't count on it, shit bag! Jeez, you get so fuckin' excited! One wrong word out of you and you've lost it. Don't move an inch, turd, or it's gone."

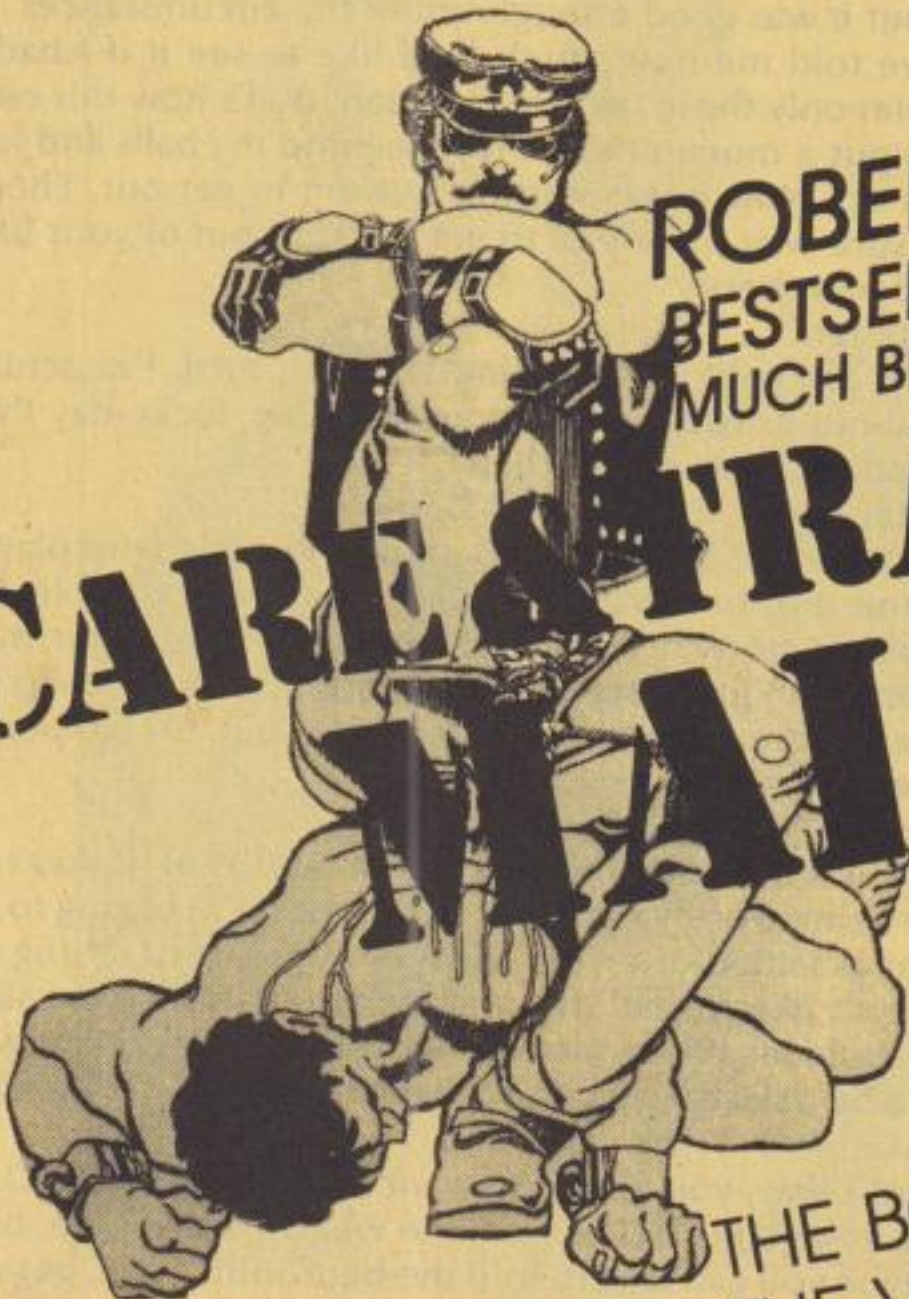

"Yes, Master."

"Don't kid yourself I'm that gung ho to get my nuts off. It's still only a maybe as far as you're concerned. It's still a tossup of that or taking care of it myself, you know?"

I set Roger's boots aside and growled, "If you so much as touch those, you're dead."

"Yes, Master."

"You think that's just some figure of speech? You better think twice or three times about that. I could snuff you right now, and who'd ever know about it? Who'd give a rat's ass? I could haul your carcass out to some dumpster, and there's nobody'd know or care. The only person that knows you're even allowed in this house is Roger, and even if he noticed you were gone, he wouldn't give a shit. I could be getting curious to know what it feels like to snuff a pile of guts. I couldn't find a more expendable one if I tried."

"Yes, Master."

"So, you know this is getting damned serious here. The closer I get to giving you a thrill, the more risk you're taking if you make a slip. You'd better be damned careful now, baby. Yeah? Okay. My feet are sweaty, and the floor's cold. I want them warm and dry. You don't move, slime! Here. This one first. I'll decide how much pressure I'll give it, you just warm and dry it. All right. That's not bad. Now, this one. You hold still! If I decide to step harder and crush your face, you just die, but you don't move. All right! I'll give you a point. You're good."

"Yes, Master."

"Point closer to what you dream about, slug. You want my cock something awful, don't you? Yeah, you sure do. Shit, if you weren't such an ugly, useless turd! You need to be whipped into shape before you can be worthy of that cock, baby. You need some of that slime beaten out of you. You know that, don't you?"

"Yes, Master."

"I'm glad we agree on that. Yeah. You know what this is? Yeah, sure you do." I'd pulled the switch off the hook on the back of the closet door and dangled it down toward his face. It was a fine piece of equipment, a special design of leather tassel that could be as gentle as a summer breeze. Yet, with the flick of a switch, a length of braided power came out of the handle and turned it into damned near a cat.

"Yes, Master."

"Let you taste it? You? I'm letting you smell it. I might even let you feel it, but you're not good enough to taste good leather like this."

I pulled it away from his face and stuck it between my legs, to jut out like a black cock over him. "Leather like this too," I growled softly as I took off my jacket. "You'd love to get your mouth on this too, I'll bet."

"Yes, Master."

I tossed the jacket aside, daring him with my stern gaze to move, to go after it and worship and care for it. He resisted the temptation to do that. I grabbed the switch firmly in my right hand and slapped at my left promisingly as I paced about over him. He was getting hotter and hotter. I thought it was the sight of my bare chest that was doing it to him. It might have been the promise of the switch.

"You're really getting scared now, scared you're going to blow it. You want to worry that you aren't going to show me you can take what it takes to be a slave. You really think you can pass the test? You want to pass that entrance exam, don't you? Beat some of the slime out of you, and maybe you can do it. A dozen across the back, maybe. You don't move, slime. When I wat you on your belly, I'll put you there. Footprint on your face. I like that. Looks good. Dirt looks better than your face, that's for sure."

"Yes, Master."

I reached down and yanked him over on his back, pushing his face into the floor. "We're getting you there, slug. Now you get to answer for pissing me off with that message before. A dozen good ones!"

I brought out the cat and gave them to him. Maybe it was a few more than twelve, maybe less, I lost count in the pure joy of getting them out! He took them well enough. He bounced on the floor with each of them and he looked like he was trying to slide away from the kiss of pain they delivered. When it seemed like he wanted to, or was thinking about trying to get under the bed, I let the cat yowl with some added force.

"Yes, Master."

I reached down again and yanked him over on his back, staring at his face. "That's getting you there, slime. Only now you've got to answer for having my balls get hot. You see? Oh, yeah, I know what you see. You see what you want in my pants, don't you? Good and hot and strong in there. You want that. Well, all right, slime. It's too tight in there; it's gotta come out. You get a good look! You earned yourself a look at it."

"Yes, Master."

That response wasn't his best choice. I was going for his thrill. I was trying to do something for him. I was displaying the hottest cock he'd ever seen in his whole, fuckin', worthless life, and he responded with the two words I'd allowed him at that moment? It made it sound a little sarcastic. I didn't like his being sarcastic. I was dropping my pants to him to let him have a good look at the seven plus inches of thick meat that he was going to be allowed to service, and he plays the game at that moment? No. Oh, no. That boiled me. I flew with that hint of sarcasm. With my pants still around my ankles, I let go and grabbed the switch from where I'd tossed it on the bed and let out a growl of rage as I slashed it hard across his face!

"Yes, Master."

That did it! We were hard at it now! He was going to taunt me with the words I gave him? He was bragging that he could take anything I gave him? I wildly slashed the cat across his face again! It left more marks than my feet had.

I stepped back and finished getting my pants off. He could stare at my cock now if he wanted. I gave him that. I let him look as I began stroking at it to soothe its demanding, anxious stretch.

"Yes, Master."

Damned if he didn't hold on! I hated his almost seeming to brag about it, but he was hanging on to every command I had given him, and he was proving himself worthy of my red-hot meat. Shit! Hot is right. I was good and hot, and so was he. I could see and feel my cock dancing up and down and even when I eased off on stroking at it, I was hot! Oh, God, I was hot!! I'd be oozing precum any second, and it needed service fast! Damn! And he'd taken it! He'd proven himself worthy! I'd let him take my cum!

"Do it good and you graduate, baby. Do it good and I'll make you my slave."

"Yes, Master."

I picked him up and threw him on the bed, then towered over him waving my cock back and forth. "I haven't decided yet," I grumbled. "You're so fuckin' ugly, I don't know which end of you is worse. You don't move! When I decide which hole to use I'll put you on it. You don't move! Your ass is disgusting. Hard to imagine that you could suck worth a shit; that takes talent. What the shit, I'm getting set to come right now, so it won't take long. I don't have to spend too much time in getting it over with. Oh, what the shit. You've done good, I guess I can let you taste it."

"Yes, Master."

"Alright, slime. Here's your big chance. Suck cock, slug. Suck it good and deep and tight and I'll make you a slave. Go on, slime, it's your big chance. Suck it! Suck the cum out of it, turd. Suck that thing. Do it!!"

"Yes, Master."

"Ohhh...yeah! Okay. Not bad, slug. Suck it deep, baby. Yeah. Pull on it good. Yeah...Uuugh...Uuughhh...Yeah! Not bad! You'll taste some cum, baby. Uuugh...uuugh...uuugh...Yeah! Mmmmmmm..."

"Yes, Master."

"Shut up! Shut up!! Ugghhh? Ahhh? No! Oh, shit! Fuck!! You can't talk while you're sucking a cock, you filthy bastard!! You shit! Ahhhh...Time to talk is— You...die!!"

I shoved him as hard as I could off the bed and he crashed to the floor. I hadn't told him to stop...to stop saying "Yes, Master." I could feel my cock in a good, hot mouth being sucked like crazy. It wasn't just my hand; it felt like a good, hot mouth, and then he had to say, "Yes, Master"! I wanted to smash him to pieces. I think I might have if I hadn't heard the front door slam.

"Hey, slave?! Get out here fast and wipe my shoes off!"

I tumbled to the floor, shut off the tape recorder and put the switch in my teeth. Now I would speak with my mouth full, the way it should have sounded. I crawled naked toward the living room and Roger, and I responded with the words I was permitted to use.

"Yes, Master."

MICHAEL A. ROSEN

At 44, San Francisco photographer Michael A. Rosen is in the process of opening new doors, for himself and for other people. He says he has a "compulsion to do things that haven't been done before; to grab you by the collar and shake you up."

Lately Rosen has been shaking people up with a self-published book of art photographs of sadomasochism called, Sexual Magic: The S/M Photographs. They are photographs of gay men, lesbians and heterosexuals captured doing SM as it is really done by real people behind closed doors. In Rosen's own words, they are "photographs of sexual magic. Photographs of Dominance and Submission, of Sadism and Masochism, of giving and receiving erotic intensity, of giving and receiving pleasure, of role playing and role reversal. The participants are having fun. They are 'turned on.' This is sex play and a journey of self-exploration."

These are photographs of sizzling, real sadomasochism, but captured in a way, and from an approach that you have never seen before. Trying to avoid the lurid stereotypes about whips-and-chains sex, Rosen has gotten down to the essentials of the SM interaction by focusing on the "energy" that is exchanged between top and bottom. Looking more like dreams than sex, Rosen's photographs are grainy, soft, intensely black-and-white images of that exchange. Don't look for the details of SM implements here; a frozen grimace becomes a blur of emotion, a whip caught stop-action becomes a wave of electricity flowing through the air.

These photographs are especially dangerous during these dark times. Despite an increasingly conservative mood throughout the country, Rosen wants to leave the world a better place than he found it. For him, creating understanding (for himself as well as others) about something so misunderstood and feared is his way of having an important impact on the world. "If you go for it," Rosen comments, "you'll be surprised at what you can accomplish."

Due to the nature of the work, Rosen self-published this book. But, despite growing critical praise, he is having a hard time getting the book into bookstores. The book can be purchased directly from Shaynew Press, PO Box 11719, San Francisco, CA 94101 ($23, postpaid).

In going one step further, Rosen has included statements from the participants in the photographs about sadomasochism. The photographs combined with the words make powerful statements about the humanity, the love, the intensity and the magical power of SM. Even Rosen has learned some things and incorporated them into his private life.

But don't expect to see your standard fantasy images. Be ready to see erotic daydreams as people really live them. The images on the following pages are from this body of work by Michael A. Rosen; some of them from his book. Rosen believes in erotic freedom and challenges the world with his book. "Don't be afraid to turn up the wick," he urges. Drummer is proud to share the work of this challenging and talented photographer with its readers.

Pain is such a harsh word. Pain to me is when I break some glass at work and I have to pick up the pieces and I get a piece of glass in my finger; that's pain to me. What we do isn't pain. He's loving me, he's touching me in a loving way. I guess that's the perception that's missing sometimes.

I'd never had anyone beat my ass like he does. It's not pain, or rather not pain negative, but pain positive. Pain ecstasy. I feel helpless, hopeless, joy, sorrow... I feel a whole range of things, but I think they all encircle, they're all composed of surrender and submission.

Boy Steven

Pain, synonymous with "undesirable" to many, is not that at all. It can be thought of as a battering ram for the very thick walls we build around us, as a means for another (the dominant) to touch us even if we have made ourselves not so easy to touch. When the wall is breached, the pain transmutes magically into intense pleasure.

Layne Winklebleck

This form of love allows me to experience complete trust and to joyfully acknowledge all of my sexual and emotional needs. To me the beauty of SM is in its paradoxes: through the intensity of pain we give ourselves more completely to each other than in perhaps any other way; through the exploration of fantasy we are honestly ourselves than at perhaps any other time. Steve W.

How far can we take our pleasures? As long as it's pleasurable for both of us, we keep exploring and expanding. Limits are set so we have a framework in which to work and the limits are expected to be expanded. We break limits, we expand them.

Limits are based on when it stops being pleasure. We're not here to see if I can beat him black and blue, or raw or red or bloody. That's not the purpose at all. The purpose is to give pleasure, to receive pleasure.

Sir Charles

When I'm submissive, I whine and I'm shy, which is the opposite of what I'm like when I'm dominant. It's not playacting, it's real and comes out that way because there are two different personae in me. The little girl in there that needs to be whipped and spanked and humiliated is not the same woman who wants to see men crawl at her feet and get them really hard and turned on and tease them and make them do her the way she wants. It's not the same person. They're both me, but they're different aspects of me. I believe that if people tap into the different personae of themselves and play with them in the context of SM or B/D with someone they trust, then life gets richer.

Cleo

The experience that I get from him isn't pain; he takes me somewhere else, and I ride with it. I keep opening up and letting go. He's very good at what he does—whipping. He seduces you into it. He's not vicious or cruel. He doesn't descend on people. He builds up intensity. He starts out where the touch of the whip is like a caress, a leather caress, and then it builds on my body. And the warmth, the heat, just starts building. It gets hotter and hotter and then it dawns on me that it's like I'm on a roller coaster and I'm starting to go up and there's no turning back and it starts getting more intense and it's very dramatic, and more intense and more intense. It's like I'm on a roller coaster and then it starts getting really fast. If I surrender I find myself flying. It's release, intensity, a high; it's like a rain of fire and I'm flying inside. I'm high. I'm very high. I get very high and when I bottom out it takes me a while to come back.

DEAR SIR—ALWAYS THE BIGGEST & BEST

SLAVE WANTED

Surrender to me your body, mind, and will. Freely give to me your unquestioning obedience, servitude, and worship. Become my property, to do as I please. Wear with pride the leather collar I will custom make for you. There is no other way. You will have a long list of regular household slave duties, which you will perform naked. You may be required to work at a conventional daytime job on the outside, maybe one beneath your skill, and turn your earnings over to me, but you will know that it is right and proper for you to do so. Your reward and pleasure will come from providing service and pleasure to me and my life partner, and, perhaps, another select man. You will be ready at all times to submit to a wide range of S/M related sex, usually as passive, occasionally as active. For rebellious action, careless performance of duty, or infraction of orders or rules on your part, your physical and mental punishment will be inevitable, severe, and painstakingly sadistic. A major part of your life of service will involve leather and motorcycles. You should be between 25 and 45, masculine, reserved. Your body should be in reasonably good shape. You must be in good health. You may use moderate amounts of alcohol and tobacco. Send a recent photo of yourself and a letter detailing reasons why I should consider sending you further details and an application. Master Les, PO Box 511265, Salt Lake City, UT 84151-1265. NIPPLES BECOME ERECTILE

Manacled to a St. Andrew's cross, you try to curse through a mouth stuffed with a moisture-robbing foam ball, as newer and weightier tit clamps send twists of pain through overloaded nerve circuits. Then pleading, your cries become gasps as a toothed-parachute harness presses insistently into your encircled scrotum. Gasps become sobs as distended balls bear more and more weights. Eternity passes as buttocks reddened from paddles swatting them into tortured firmness. Your asshole, stretched from its dildo-topped perch, now yields to one toy after another. Then darkness. Encapsulated in isolation from sight and sound, your nerve endings flush from sensuous strokes of leather across distended testicles, even as they recoil from drip after drip of hot wax. More than yesterday's torture, less than tomorrow's. When will it end? Will you collapse before your 40-year-old GWM Daddy gives the final rub-down with hot oil and says, "You passed, son. Cum." The tape recording of your agony will be a turn-on if you never serve another Master. Within 150-mile radius of New Orleans, can pay may own travel expenses. Can occasionally combine pain and business trips to Atlanta, Birmingham, Denver, Spokane. Most scenes, but medically-aware trips only, however heavy you ask for. Masters: describe your playrooms. Very handsome, 30-year-old, 6'3", blond/blue, moustached, 190-lb., semi-muscular man seeking romance leading to long-term, committed, intimate relationship with special leatherman possessing striking looks, gym-defined muscles and heart. I am an aggressive bottom, you top, possibly capable of occ. reverse roles; or no roles. Few of my favorite things: Full leather; grinding, slamming, punching muscle contact (hard!); eye contact; body worship; oil, sweat, mirrors; uniforms; workouts; prolonged titwork (too much!); hot talk, VA; sloppy deep-mouth kissing; B&D, S&M, C&BT; swallowing heavy nuts; and role-playing in radical fantasies (see my Superman vs. Superfoe ad in Drummer 91 for one of mine). All this and more explored together in intense, long, sensual play until sensory and emotional overload send us over the edge into altered states. Health-conscious and use occ. alcohol, amyl, recreational drugs; prefer nonsmoker. But what about the rest of me? and you? Let's find out. All responses with photo, address, phone no. will be answered likewise. Box 4943LF

BIG GUY—LITTLE GUYS A TURN-ON?

This little guy needs a man over 5'9" who prefers short men and knows how to use the difference in our height and strength to your advantage and our mutual excitement. With a little guy, do you ache to: pin him down, pleasure him until he screams (but not stop), win his trust over time, and then initiate him into light bondage? Do you yearn to explore and expand each other's erotic responses to D/S? Objective: monogamous, safe-sex relationship based on open communication, affection, growing together, and deeply-shared sexual needs; a relationship that won't be equal in the bedroom, but will be outside of it because you want this little guy as your partner, and not just as a sex buddy. Me: WM, boyish thirties, 5'5", 120, handsome, bearded, responsive. Likes: beach, mountains, music, candlelight dinners, cuddling, surprises. You: 30s/youthful 40s, masculine, attractive, fit, healthy, affectionate, nonsmoker, drugfree, progressive thinker. Optional: bearded, outdoorsy, artistic. Letter/photo: 584 Castro, Suite 609, San Francisco, CA 94114-2588 (LF4952).

DRUMMER DADDY

If you are man enough to take rough treatment like B/D, TT, C/BT and whipping, then you earn my respect and possible affection. Body shaving second session to mark my ownership and your commitment. For health reasons you will not be required to eat ass or take my load, but everything else goes. Will discuss your limits and a program to expand them. Application with nude photo given preference. SIXTY PLUS?

White male needs older male (60+) who is masculine and has experience. I am 34, healthy, in good physical shape, an eager, willing learner and I am considered very good-looking. Am not a complete novice, rather prefer a person who understands his own enjoyments and can move things, mature in his direction. I've been told on several occasions that my French abilities are the best (ever). And as this was always by someone senior, with many years of experience, this may be particularly meaningful. In addition, I have had a bit of experience around bondage and discipline. But your preferences are foremost and I would expect to adapt myself to your pleasures.

If it wouldn't be embarrassing or a turn-off to you, a recent picture or pictures of you would be much valued by me...either the regular type, revealing, in action, whatever. The only reason why I mention "recent" is because to me, this would be the most attractive and stimulating. Grey or white hair is a definite plus. For the person who fits these images, I would want very much to bring pleasure, that is, to satisfy him in every way.

I live in NY now, am in NYC almost daily and I travel outside NY on a regular basis (Midwest and Fla. now). Relocation could be arranged if a full-time situation turned out to be desirable to you. Please write soon? Box 5105LF

Prisoner for bondage and submission control by sadistic Drummer Dad. WJM, 47, 6'1", 210, grey beard, safe/sane, dominant and mean, seeking absolutely clean/healthy monogamous and overeducated male in good shape. Your fantasies are to be captured, tied up, and forced to submit to the will of a dominant man who will issue orders to be followed and mete out suitable punishment that includes verbal abuse, face slapping, body-wrap, TT, restraints, cuffs, and enough taste of the leather belt to make you whimper and cry until you learn to apologize for being a victim. Strict rules include: No drugs! No WS! No Scat! NO BODY FLUIDS! Total "safe-sex guidelines"! Non-dangerous situation and rewarding ultimate relationship for the right guy. Levi-leather-uniforms are a turn-on. If the above has always been your needs and you've been afraid to explore them—this is the right man to apply to. This is not for hit-and-run. A permanent "friendship" with trust and safety is what I am seeking. No bar life or trashy lifestyle tolerated. Absolutely NO raunch or sleaze in my background, so you be the same. Submit fully detailed letter with photo. Tell me how and why control, discipline, bondage, punching, leather gloves, interrogation and mirror sunglasses would suit your mental and physical well-being. Reply to Box 4718LF

Would like to meet other hot, masculine, barefoot studs, young punks, and street dudes, who are the same, with tough, calloused feet that are always filthy dirty—for barefoot outings, correspondence, and hot, man-to-man action. Love going barefoot on dirty city streets, in stores, bars, gyms, etc. Also barefoot and barechested in old jeans or cutoffs. THE LEATHER UPDATE ON FILMS/BOOKS/VIDEO/AUDIO RAUNCH TWO: Christopher Rage opens the sluices from dribble to drench in his new video.

Christopher Rage's newest video is a rhapsody of raunch, a piss pig's paradise of squirt, spurt, spill and slop. It's a paean to piss called, appropriately enough, Raunch Two, a sequel to his earlier Raunch. In its delectation of watersports, Rage opens the sluices from dribble to drench and from douse to deluge, rejoicing in piss with an effusion of method. He employs ballooning rubbers, bloated plasma bags, blighted Levi's and brimming crystal goblets. He has taped showering cocks and guzzling mouths, emptying enema bags and the resultant fountaining assholes.

Best of all, he has done so with an attitude that is reverent and hypnotic, yet not lethargic. Invoking a worshipful intensity from his cast and directing with a measured pace which appreciates the ritual of sex play has allowed Rage to record the psychological as well as the physical connections of his men. The result slows our sense of time and digs beneath surface sensation for a stoned reverie that has a deep and cumulative effect. These long build-ups are made for slow stroking.

Raunch Two is an hour-long video shot with the usual Rage attention to focus, color and appropriate sound. In Raunch Two Rage uses little musical or electronic scoring, for the pulse and splash of the sport itself is music enough. Always a stand-out in his own casts, Rage is abetted here by favorite members of his raunch repertory company as well as some interesting newcomers.

Denton Crane narrates and plays a chief role, his dark, thick lips lasciviously issuing the refrain which haunts the video: "You want some piss? You wanna taste my piss?" Crane delivers, in too many instances to be detailed here, to Rage, to popular Bosch Wagner and to others.

The video is arranged neatly in segments, each featuring two or three separate couplings; their intensifying action and simultaneous conclusions intercut for mounting arousal. In one, a sleek black beauty sporting tit clamps and a heavy weight hanging from his ball stretcher is intercut with a young, blond collegiate type in Levis. The blond pisses in his pants, removes them and sucks his piss from the dripping crotch while the black man pisses into clear plastic tubing and jacks off.

In another scene, an absolutely sleazoid kid buries his face in the heavily bulging jockstrap of a friend, whose piss straining through the jock triggers the youth's spurting orgasm.

Rage, reclining, sucks an asshole, his tongue darting like a lizard's as the ass writhes upon his face. The scene becomes a trio, two men taking turns plugging and sucking the ass simultaneously, until cum showers down on them from above.

In the video's most sensational scene, Denton Crane is back, whispering, "This is for you, man," filling a plastic bag with piss and plugging it into a asshole. Unplugged, this highly controlled ass spurts long arching streams of piss through the air. It splashes noisily onto the mats below and the torrent slows to a trickle, slipping over low-hanging balls and dripping drop by visible drop to the floor.

Rage—good god, he's sleazy—is back next, guzzling and gurgling mouthfuls of piss from a whumping cock. Then there's a foursome, in which Johnny Jule's raven hair shimmers in a shower of piss. He nestles his face into a blond's crotch while the blond pisses over him, their pose a perverse Pieta, a religious look on Jules' face.

Among other scenes are two leathermen in chaps sharing a piss 69, and Bosch Wagner giving head to a man whose piss glides out on silver strands of precum while the camera feasts on incredible cock close-ups as Wagner's tongue coaxes the cockhead to give up more juice. Altogether, it's a piss dream, delivered in every imagined—and some previously unimagined—fashion, all given straight to the camera for ultimate connection to the viewer.

With the porn industry mired in formula, grinding out the regulation couplings of look-alike partners, Christopher Rage may well be the Saviour of Sleaze. His videos are exactly what the current President's Commission on Pornography and Obscenity is outraged by, and exactly what you'll be unable to buy if they have their way. In Rage's case, this lies less in what he depicts than in his attitude towards it. He creates a video world we couldn't call obscene, but to which the label pornographic seems to apply. Simply and appreciably, Rage can shock as he seduces. Raunch Two is a hard act to follow—or swallow. My usual plea/warning: External watersports can be safe sex. Ingestion, whether oral or anal, if not your own, seems unwise.

BAD NIGHT AND WORSE POLITICS

DANGEROUSLY CLOSE: Leader of The Sentinels enjoys a stogie.

If your taste in trade runs to South-of-the-border types you'll relate to Walt (Tim Streeter), the central character of Gus Van Sant's Mala Noche, a gay drama which is bound to sound more depressing than it plays.

Mala Noche (Bad Night) is a story of a one-way love set among the have-nots of Portland, Oregon, based on Walt Curtis' autobiographical novella.

Walt works in a skid-row store that sells the necessities—wine and cigarettes—to the winos and illegal immigrants who make up the neighborhood. A young Mexican, Johnny (Doug Cooney), turns Walt on, but Johnny is too firmly rooted in Latin machismo and won't fuck Walt—for less than $25. Walt only has $15 so he settles for Johnny's friend Pepper (Ray Monge).

"My ass is sore," Walt says the next day. "I think he tried to use his cock like a weapon on me. Macho fucking prick." Later, after Johnny leaves and they settle into a sort-of relationship, Walt tells Pepper, "You drive like you fuck."

The danger of Walt's situation is underscored by a news story about an alien who killed a local man claiming he made "homosexual advances," and by Johnny introducing a gun into the household.

The story ends abruptly but Van Sant returns to happier times for an upbeat coda. Most of the photography is more black than white, going further toward obscurity than is required.

Still, a lot of grim reality is on view in this promising first feature which was shown at the Seattle International and San Francisco International Lesbian and Gay Film Festivals.

DEMOCRACY INACTION

If fascism scares you it's time to get nervous. Two movies on the subject opened in May. The one that opposes fascism, Dangerously Close, was gone before June, while the one that embraces it, Cobra, will probably play until Christmas.

To be fair, Dangerously Close was made on a low budget with a cast of pretty but little- to un-known actors while Cobra stars Sylvester Stallone and spends more on wrecked vehicles than Liz Taylor does on jewelry. The artistic style of director Albert Pyun hurts Dangerously Close as much as its unfashionable political stance. It should have been a sleazy exploitation melodrama, but Pyun's attempts to give it respectability leave it mired in the mediocre middle.

The Sentinels, a gang of preppies led by John Stockwell, are trying to rid their high school of "undesirable" poor and minority students by way of SM rituals that resemble a fraternity initiation. Unknown to them, someone is adding murder to the mix.

Crusading school newspaper editor J. Eddie Peck, after nearly being coopted by the Sentinels, gets the goods on them when his outre best friend, smart-ass punker Bradford Bancroft disappears.

Today's movie audiences are too jaded to accept the suspense tease Dangerously Close offers without a better orgasm than it provides.

BIG-HEADED DICK

Cobra would have us believe La Stallone is the cop of last resort the others turn to in situations they can't handle, or when they're afraid the wimpy courts will free a criminal: "We put 'em away, they let 'em out... As long as we gotta play by these bullshit rules and the killer doesn't, we're gonna lose."

We meet him as he goes into a supermarket where a psycho has killed half the people and is holding the others hostage. "I'll blow this whole place up," the psycho threatens. "Go ahead," says the Cobra. "I don't shop here." And there's not a dry crotch in the house as he wastes the sucker. It turns out that the killer is part of a cult of demented, axe-wielding bikers committed to some kind of "new world" where only the strong survive. They meet in a skull-trimmed dungeon and spend the night doing worshipful aerobics when they're not out on murder missions. There are about fifty men in the cult and one woman, Lee Garlington, who also happens to be on the police force.

Machismo, which equals death, is the real issue here. The Cobra may be overcompensating for his name, Marion Cobretti. He prefers his nickname with its symbolism of a big-headed dick. No one mentions that John Wayne's real name was Marion, but it's no coincidence. While the plot resembles Dirty Harry, Stallone is much closer to Wayne than Clint Eastwood, whose manhood is always taken for granted without having to be proven every ten minutes.

It would be nice to have the streets made safe for decent folk—if we could be on the side that decides who the decent folk are. In the Cobra's world you bet your ass we're not.

SHOT DOWN

Top Gun doesn't join in the "Die, Commie, Die!" hysteria Rambo and his ilk brought back in vogue. It takes the more subtle and insidious "Blips Don't Bleed" approach to sell war to children.

The Navy trains its fliers on sophisticated video games, so they can use the same techniques when they get up in the air in $36-million machines—some fancy maneuvering at hundreds of miles per hour, lock a blip in the radar sight and poof! You haven't killed anyone, you haven't destroyed someone else's $36-million machine—you've just scored a replay. Give me another quarter, daddy.

Tom Cruise is a good pilot, but reckless and cocky. He goes to Top Gun school to be brought down a peg. With him goes his sidekick Anthony Edwards, a character who, in the world of movie clichés, is born to die. There also has to be an adversary whose respect Cruise can win, and Val Kilmer sleepwalks through this role. Commanding officer Tom Skerritt is a father figure for the orphaned (awwwww) Cruise.

Finally, flying has to look sexy, and Hollywood doesn't give a shit about our fantasies (like a school orgy we can project ourselves into the middle of); so Kelly McGillis is the older woman who can't resist the star's debatable charm. She has no Cruise control.

I can respect the kind of movie Top Gun tries to be, but this one doesn't score nearly as high as it smugly assumes it does.

—Steve Warren

DANGEROUSLY CLOSE: The Sentinels, masked to hide their identities, terrorize a defiant punker.

STREET-TOUGH: Sylvester Stallone holds off killers from the back of his pickup truck during a tense moment in the new police action thriller Cobra.

By the time Dances Sacred and Profane reaches most movies theatres, reviews such as this one will have piqued interest in what could be called the main event of the film, the Sioux O-Kee-Pa Sundance ritual as performed in Wyoming by Bay Area shaman Fakir Musafar and his assistant, Jim Ward. It's an intense ceremony, familiar to many as the key sequence of the Richard Harris film A Man Called Horse. It's wise, therefore, for documentary filmmakers Mark and Dan Jury to sate some of the audience's curiosity by giving us a portion of the ceremony up front before moving on to the body of the film, saving the majority of the Sundance for the end—like when the Beatles used to appear on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

From that opening teaser, Dances moves to the subcultural netherworlds of photographer Charles Gatewood, upon whose work the film is based. Gatewood is a chronicler of the sexual and forbidden, from the simpler rituals of Mardi Gras, drag and nudist colonies to the deeper subcultural permutations of the Hellfire Club type of SM orgies and genital piercings—as Gatewood says in a filmed interview, "Want to talk about a sub-subculture?"

Gatewood seeks out the triple subcultures of our world and tries to relate them to our past and present. It's almost an inversion of the work of the late Diane Arbus, who celebrated the grotesque and bizarre nature of environments we take for granted. Though she found some subjects at drag balls or mental institutions, some of her most affecting work is found in her freak show studies of suburban leisure activity or the denizens of New York's Washington Square Park; even a Republican National Convention. Gatewood, on the other hand, wanders through his unusual milieu trying to find the everyday, the "meat" from these scenes that we can relate to our own lives. The photos explore rather than exploit, making accessible the unnaturalness that one might instinctively turn away from. Often the result is a study of the human being behind the mask, be it a multitude of genital piercings or intricate full-body tattoos. By humanizing his subjects, Gatewood creates an atmosphere for the erosion of stereotypes, one of the primary aims of any art form.

In researching historic similarities to Musafar's work, Gatewood is filmed watching documentary footage from the Smithsonian taken by anthropologist Robert Haupt in India during the 1930s. Indian holymen are seen performing various rituals involving self-mutilation and what seems to be a variant on Sundancing. Here, almost as fascinating as the films themselves is Gatewood's expression as he views them. Gatewood is alive and engrossed, a true seeker of knowledge. His eyes shine with the nonjudgmental, intellectual curiosity that compels (and is evident in) his work.

Fakir Musafar comes by his obsession with piercing rituals past and present naturally, claiming to have been driven toward the idea of piercing and Sundancing since he first tried it with great accuracy at the age of fourteen. Musafar's belief in reincarnation is largely responsible for his drive to explore the O-Kee-Pa ritual. Exploring his history and philosophy, the filmmakers achieve much the same effect as Gatewood's photographs. Musafar discusses his rather conventional autobiography with calm lucidity as he sits near naked with half-inch tubes in his nipples and two rounded steel daggers stuck in holes previously pierced through his pectorals.

Dances follows Gatewood, Musafar, and Ward through Wyoming as they perform the many preliminaries to the Sundance ritual; Musafar picking a secluded cottonwood tree that will serve his purpose, Musafar and Ward divining energy from Devil's Tower, Musafar limbering up for the ceremony (in a somewhat anachronistic manner: he golfs). Musafar and Ward first engage in a preliminary form of Sundancing in which they tie rope from the tree to metal needles pierced through a quarter-inch of flesh in their chests. They then lean away from the tree, letting their body weight gently pull them backwards as the skin is stretched several inches from the chest. This goes on for hours, until the flesh tears, and human flesh, obviously, is more than a little durable. As Gatewood observes, it is both exciting and painful to watch, but by working slowly, they build up the natural opiates in their bodies which will allow Musafar to proceed to the next step.

Musafar modestly calls the final sequence "a more severe form" of Sundancing. Metal "flesh hooks" are placed in his pierced chest and tied to a trapezoidal device that is hung from the cottonwood. Slowly, he rotates the swing himself, and as the ropes holding it to the tree twist, he is slowly lifted off the ground. Jim Ward takes over the operation as Musafar's feet begin to leave the ground since Musafar must, as he explains, "completely give in to it." The principle of the ceremony is to completely leave one's physical being behind and ultimately, to meet one's creator. Does Musafar succeed? As he is lowered by Ward, his blissful expression speaks volumes, and his voice narrates:

I was up there with the creators of the universe. It was a dimension that I don't think I've ever been in before that...it was just...I don't know how you'd say it; I guess it's "cosmic" or something. Boy, I've never been up in that kind of a level. I mean, you know, there are gods and demigods and Great White Lights and Great White Spirit but this was way up there, the Great Spirit or whatever was the one who sucked me up right through into the physical sun and out there somewhere. And, you know, they were speaking, there was music of a sort. It was magnificent stuff, and, uh...they told me things.

Dances Sacred and Profane isn't for everyone—even the hip, leather-familiar audience at the San Francisco premiere of Dances squirmed somewhat during certain portions of the film—but there is definitely a sense of awe at the feat these individuals perform. One of the drawbacks to the film is delineated by Musafar right in the movie: over clips from a football game he explains that Americans seem to derive their physical experiences second-hand; here are a couple of dozen men having an actual physical experience as 80,000 fans watch them, having the experience vicariously. I wonder how many of the people in theatres where Dances is showing will realize that the same principle is involved with an audience viewing the film.

Still, it's an incredible undertaking done with a fiercely intelligent sensitivity, and while anyone can play football, Sundancing is probably not an experience for which many would have the patience, inclination and/or spiritual dedication. Dances Sacred and Profane is a noble film about a noble subject, and for those cynical as to the mystical forces that guide it, low-level proof: though probably not planned by either party, on the San Francisco opening night of the documentary, a local independent TV station was showing an interesting variant on the western—maybe you've seen it: A Man Called Horse.

COCKTEASER/BRAINTEASER

At the beginning of Robert Gluck's new novel Jack the Modernist (Gay Presses of New York, $7.95) he cites Drummer as an influence. Gluck also mentions Denis Diderot's art criticism and the theories about it in Michael Fried's Absorption and Theatricality, Lafcadio Hearn's Kwaidan, the letters of Neil Voegtle, Goethe, Barthes, Ovid and Bataille. And Jack the Modernist is exactly the sort of book you'd think would result from an author's immersion in such eclectic, esoteric and contradictory source.

Segments from Jack the Modernist were published in Five Fingers Review, No Apologies, Zyzyva, Ottotole (I've never heard of any of them, but they sound suffocatingly literary, the type of journals you've never read—does anyone?—but might place on the coffee table to impress tricks with your pretensions)—and, for a change of pace, in Advocate Men, too. Gluck wants to produce high-toned literature, but I think he'd also like us to be able to jerk off to it. (He wants a good rep in Gay Lit circles, but he'd also like a few readers.)

That may not be an impossible task (A.N. Roquelaure came close to Stroke Art in the Beauty books), but it's certainly not a simple one, and I doubt it could be accomplished in the cold, postmodernist, syntax-fractured style Gluck employs. Jack the Mod- ernist produces stirrings in the crotch and stirrings in the brain, but neither cock nor mind is given quite enough stimulation for the climactic payoff. Gluck's both a cockteaser and a brainteaser, and while that's certainly not a negligible act to pull off, it's not one guaranteed to win wild social approval.

Bob meets Jack. Jack and Bob have a lot of sex. Phyllis' son is killed. Bob and Jack break up. Bob has sex with Jack's once (and future?) lover. That's about the entire plot of Jack the Modernist so we may safely conclude that a powerful narrative drive is not Gluck's strong suit. But since there are only four basic plots (and some minor variations thereon) to gay novels anyway—the ghetto plot, the genre plot, the coming-out plot, the porno plot—it's not that we're really missing anything in the virtually plotless Jack the Modernist.

My guess is that Gluck would like to write porno, but he's embarrassed by it. He tries for metaphysical smut like "I want him to suck for a long time, for hours, until he becomes completely identified with it—like a starfish whose grip on the rock makes up the better part of its being" and "Jack's cock was the toothpick that stabilized my club sandwich of being and nothingness," (which embarrasses me, or maybe those are the jokes).

At the same time he understands the pornographic verities: "The more you get fucked, the more you want it; eventually the pornographic hungry hole becomes merely accurate." In one passage Gluck breaks down a stock porno scene—a night at the baths (remember them?):

happening—sex as a consciousness altering state—yet the

:a man on his hands and knees, another man milks him like a cow—the sperm comes—a low huh from the spectators experience is limited to so few; in the first place a gay orgy

:a man kneels is feared as unnatural; in the second place a gay orgy is

:a man stands feet apart slowly masturbating and glazing at a man who masturbates standing feet apart and returning his gaze

feared as too natural.

It's almost art and it's almost hot, but it's not really completely either. As brilliant as passages in Jack the Modernist are, they never form a whole anything.

In keeping with the conventions of postmodernism Gluck keeps himself in the center of the book. (The rules governing the avant-garde are as strict and as rigidly enforced as the rules governing Harlequin Romances—did Gluck, Dennis Cooper, Bret Easton Ellis, Brad Gooch, the dread David Leavitt, whose next book is called The Lost Language of Cranes—are you just dying to read it?—Robert Ferro take Edmund White's course in "Confusion and Agnost and Blankness and Silent Stares into the Ruined Future in the Modern Novel: How To" or what?)

His writing the book is the most important theme of the book. Writers writing about writers writing—wouldn't you love to take an axe to their word processors? But damned if Gluck doesn't know just what he's doing: "That's why I'm writing to you—would you prefer silences to a morbid love story held together by a long freight train of equal signs and propelled by a modern emotion? I don't think there's a name for it yet; call it excited neutrality." Call it bull's-eye self-criticism, too.

Yet I found Jack the Modernist oddly compelling. It's maddening but never boring, but I'm not sure that what I love in a friend I want in a book. Gluck obviously has talent. He's got a sharp eye for the strange, yet apt, description.

Of two characters in the film An American Werewolf in London:

In life Judith and Harry were hopelessly trivial with the worst chirrupy public school accent, always popping off or carrying on, and the joke is that death does not transfigure them, does not ennoble them or give them access to an essence or a Truth or even a point of view; the mystery and gravity of their position vis-a-vis the Ultimate expresses itself in a fit of pique and a death-is-a-knock-knock-joke giddiness.

About an orgy:

We watch the pleasure rather than the men, feeling their potential interchangeability.

A letter to an exlover closes with

You've been a rude boy. You know you have. Bad boy, you must know that I'm going to punish you. I have to punish you before I can forgive you—you realize that, don't you Brain?

and Gluck comments

I got a hardon as I wrote it. John Preston sent Jason, his slave, an envelope containing a few long steel pins. No words. I hardly aspire to such fierce poetry; it takes my breath away. Steel pins, Dear Abby? "What do I know. If Jason wants them, certainly, but has he thought about seeing his priest or rabbi. They wave goodbye from a sepia photograph. God bless and let me hear from you again. I care."

When Gluck's collection of stories Elements of a Coffee Service was published to great acclaim, a San Francisco-based colleague explained my inability to work up much enthusiasm for it: "Of course, you didn't understand it. You East Coast types are all so...so...so linear." Gluck writes from the middle out; he's interested only in the pure flow of words. He can write exquisite sentences, occasionally bravura paragraphs, but he can't sustain his expert craftsmanship throughout an entire book.

Gluck moves very close to his characters, so close he blurs them. He wants to make us share his vision, but his camera probes haphazardly. He needs more light. Not only can't we see the forest for the trees, but the trees are growing dimmer too. That may be the point of Jack the Modernist; the novel's about its own evaporation. Welcome to the Void, says Robert Gluck, the elegant prose stylist, I'm the official doorman.

REQUIEM

by T.R. Witomski

Everyone who was ever there agrees. There was nothing else like it. For almost a decade in New York City, the Mineshaft was the world's premiere leather bar. An SM Mecca, gay hedonism's holy of holies, it was celebrated in scores of erotic novels and stories, faked in the film Cruising, acclaimed and damned in the gay press. And now, it is another casualty of AIDS hysteria.

"The first time I ever went to the Mineshaft..." is such an oft-told tale that it's almost cliché. The Mineshaft was the stuff that dreams are made of. A legend. Only a memory today, the 'shaft will never truly die, but will remain a part of the gay erotic consciousness.

The Mineshaft was the fullest expression of gay sexual freedom. Whatever your scene was—whether it was wandering around the maze of rooms naked, receptive to all cocks, getting pissed on while reclining in one of the WS room's several bathtubs or taking fists—you felt accepted at the Mineshaft. There was no sexual behavior that was frowned on (except maybe for the stench of scat); your nastiest thought could be safely acted out within 835 Washington Street.

We first went to the Mineshaft still flushed from the intoxicating rush that gay liberation had given us in the mid-1970s. The closet doors had been dynamited open; gay sex, so long repressed, entered its Golden Age. Erotic experimentation was not only permitted, but encouraged. Correct sexual politics meant doing it, often, with as many partners as possible in all possible variations.

At the Mineshaft our wildest fantasies became flesh. And in this wonderland of sexual pleasure, we experienced a sense of community. The Mineshaft was more of a brotherhood than a bar. Unlike strangers who gathered at other bars, visitors to the 'shaft shared a set of values. We were sexual radicals, finding ourselves by delving into our erotic minds, achieving personal liberation and giving new truth to the famous quote "The personal is the political."

When the health crisis first became news, the Mineshaft was in the vanguard of urging gay men to steer a safe course. The management of the 'shaft plastered safe-sex guidelines on the walls, distributed condoms and ran numerous AIDS benefits. But to our heterosexual enemies (sadly joined by some sexually repressed gays) the Mineshaft remained a symbol of decadent evil. Patrons of the 'shaft reveled in their sexuality, and in the twisted logic that has sprang up in the paranoid eighties, gay sex, not AIDS, needed to be stamped out.

The simple fact that you get AIDS from a virus, not from a place, could not prevent the 'shaft from being closed. The craziness of the press, particularly the New York Post, turned the Mineshaft into a cause celebre. It's mordantly ironic that the same folks who are vehemently opposed to federal and state funding for AIDS research and treatment and to the establishing of AIDS hospices in their neighborhoods maintained that closing the Mineshaft would safeguard the health of gay men. The health of faggots is hardly concern for most straights. They wanted the 'shaft shut to prevent those awful queers from doing God-only-knows-what. Erotophobia, more than the fear of AIDS, required that the Mineshaft be made a sacrificial victim.

Ah, but I will never forget the first time I went to the Mineshaft...and I will never forget that night at the Mineshaft when I...

THE SOUTH OF THE SLOT HOTEL

by Mark I. Chester

Don't ask me about the truth. When it comes to bathhouses, there is no such thing as the truth. There is only remembered reality. A nonlinear abstract dreamscape drawn in Criscoed sheets and reflected in mirrors, trailing jet streams of dried-up dreams. Slap smack sex. Bruised butts. Darkened passions and inflamed desires.

The South of the Slot Hotel, San Francisco. Everything you've ever heard is true. Its reputation is only surpassed by its reality. Known by gay men into radical sex from all over the world. The Slot. Three floors of slam-bam-rock-and-roll sex. Everything from showers and a TV to public orgy spaces and private fantasy rooms. Everything from the sweetest fucking and sucking to the sickest, weirdest shit that you have ever seen. Sick? Well, if nuclear bombs and contingency plans for winning a nuclear war are signs of normality, I'll stick with what society labels "sick, weird shit."

The Slot was a crazy little building on Folsom Street. Sometimes water leaked from the second floor and ultimately rotted out the first-floor ceiling in parts, not to mention the furniture and the carpeting. Sometimes a fucked-up, give-a-shit management allowed speed freaks and dealers to swallow up and cancel the hot-sex energy. And the floor was so slanted, and everything was so saturated with so much Crisco, the regulars joked that you could slide down the hallways and stairs. You were surprised (and relieved) to discover in the morning that the Slot had neither fallen down nor burned to the ground.

But in spite of these thorns in the side of desperate desire, the Slot was a haven. A safe place. A place where you could let down those barriers that keep you protected when you live in the midst of a homophobic society. (You're wrong if you think that San Francisco isn't homophobic. There are just too many of us for them to be too consciously nasty for too long a time.) A place where it was okay for us to be intense, down-and-dirty, radical faggots without the rest of the world looking over our shoulders and wrinkling their noses. But they don't understand. How could they? They've always been what they were told to be. They've always fit in. Filled the mold. Not made waves. To them, the Slot was filled with a multitude of anonymous perverts, fucking like fucking bunnies. But to me, the Slot was filled with family. Regulars who knew each other. Watched out for each other. Talked. Joked. Hung out. Shared all the ups and downs of urban animals who drank from the same watering hole. An oasis in the desert. A place where we could be real. Where we could transform our erotic daydreams into fantastical realities. A place we could call home.

In one sense they were right. The Slot was filled with a multitude of anonymous perverts. And yet the Slot was also filled with intimacy. For there can be great intimacy in the stolen, shared moments that pass between men who are labeled outcasts by the rest of the world. Pansexual rituals of ecstasy. Priapian erections. Dionysian delights. Gods of the dark arisen from the underworld to demand submission and sticky release.

Fancy language, but what do you expect of someone who reached puberty in the stacks of the library? You see, the Slot was like that. You found whatever it was you were looking for. Friendship? It was there. A place to relax? It was there. A place to get crazy and wild and fun? It was there. All you had to do was look at the bulletin board on the first floor.

No other sex palace had a bulletin board quite like it. Chalked-in obsessions. Things you wanted to do. Things you had never heard of and therefore especially wanted to do. SM, top, bottom, fetishes, FF and one section for vanilla sex, but only one section. The notices read like this: "Piss slave seeks drenching by all comers, Room 236." Or: "Leather Master into clothespins, wax and pain, Room 321." Or: "Asshole slave seeks deep hole plugging, dildoes and asshole torture. Waiting in 2nd floor bathroom." Signposts on the underbelly of gay sexuality.

Or you could walk the halls. Past open doors with leathern figures waiting to materialize out of the darkness. A different fantasy behind every door. The Club Baths kept out anyone who was not young, thin and cute. The superhunks, self-appointed gifts from God went to the Hot House. But the Slot was open to them all. Young. Old. Beautiful. Those so ugly that they were beautiful. Novices and jaded leathermen.

Each regular had his own room. A room that somehow suited him and spoke to his character, his sex trip and his game. Mine was Room 233. For a boy from the midwest, Room 233 was as close to nirvana as I had ever gotten. A four-poster bed. Screw eyes and pulleys bolted into the ceiling. Screweyes bolted into the wall. Mirrors at strategic points. A jungle gym for nasty little boys into ropes and chains and restraints of every shape, style and kind.

For some, it was a waiting game. Take a room, set the trap and wait to see what walks in. Like digging for sexual surprises in a Cracker Jack box. But I brought my surprises with me: the bags of toys reflecting the individual tastes and needs of each new man-boy seeking release. I came to the Slot a scared boy and I left a sexually radical man. Touchstones on a path of which there is no turning back.

But times change. One day, the Slot was not enough. I built my own play space based on lessons learned in Room 233. And then times changed more. And then so much more that there was no way to ever go back.

There is a long list, a list of ghosts in San Francisco. Among them is the Hungry Hole, the Barracks, the Fair Oaks, the Hot House, the Caldron, the Club Baths, the Catacombs. And now, the Slot. They are chapters in a book that is closed forever. We are living a trial by fire, a fire that has reduced our houses to ash. But out of the ashes will rise a phoenix. I know. Some of us can already feel the flutter of wings. □

THE LEATHER BULLETIN BOARD

The following has been a matter that needed to be addressed for some time. It is a more serious matter than the usual Bulletin Board, as I perceive it.

I recently had a long telephone conversation with Wayne Haskell of Mr. S Leather in Denver. Wayne is regarded as a gentle man as well as a gentleman. His concern for the leather community is borne by his perception of brotherhood and the awful AIDS crisis. Much has been written about AIDS and how it has affected all of us in one way or another.

The leather community has always been a brotherhood of distinct and unique individuals. Apart from our self-perception, we are fairly united in how we see our community. This strength has never been so evident than in this AIDS crisis. Many of us have lost lovers and friends. None of us have been left untouched by this terrible sadness. Most leather men have marshalled their love, dedication and personal resources toward defeating this disease.

In the past most of the remainder of the community have looked at us with something of a jaundiced eye, colored by suspicion, misunderstanding and yes, some envy. Lack of understanding has never daunted us because we have had the strength of our convictions. We have been accused of being overly masculine as if that were some sort of aberration. It's just the way we are. For most of us our dedication to leather, and the man-to-man scenes which have given it meaning, has given it a quality which exceeds other lifestyles.

On the other hand, there have been some negative effects which are due, mainly, from overreaction. Some men have folded up their leather and withdrawn into the closet. This withdrawal can only be termed paranoia.

When AIDS first assumed epidemic proportions, I saw it as both a tragedy and an awakening. The tragedy is evident, but the awakening has been slow to materialize. The guidelines have been established for safe and sane sex. Leathermen can readily understand this since many of them have practiced safe and sane SM. SM has been perceived by the uninitiated as the pain/pleasure dichotomy, where that is only part of it, and, in many instances, does not even enter the scene. Aside from the possible physical aspects, there is also the psychological interaction between two people. It can be very erotic and does not, in many instances, result in penetration and orgasm. There are more ways of getting off than fucking and sucking.

For many years our community has preached responsibility. There is a misconception that the top ties up the bottom and beats the bejesus out of him. Many tops will tell you that the scene is choreographed along the needs of each individual. The energy flow between the top and the bottom are the essential ingredients. Without this rapport between the two men there can be no real scene.

New men are curious about leathermen and they are seeking new sexual expressions for themselves. It is necessary that we take up the challenge and responsibility for teaching them to learn the sensuality of leather and the fulfillment in our man-sex.

Those men who have withdrawn from leather should reconsider. All that AIDS has done is add another dimension to the safety factor which we are all familiar with. Wear your leather with pride. We have never fled from a challenge before and this crisis demands that we meet it head on and prove that we are up to the challenge.

Wayne is a thoughtful man, and he, like so many others, has expressed a concern which all of us should feel. He has not fled from it, notwithstanding his own personal tragedy, he has dealt with it as he would hope that others would. I concur fully with him.

Another year has passed and the finals for MR. DRUMMER 1986 are almost upon us. In the past people have expressed a concern over the two contests—MR. DRUMMER and MR. INTERNATIONAL LEATHER. I don't feel that there is anything to be concerned about. Neither contest is competing. They are, rather, expressions of solidarity among the leather community. The men who participate in each represent the best in our community. Each winner of the contests will carry the banner proudly and serve the best interests of the entire community.

In Drummer 95 I mentioned the GMSMA (Gay Male SM Activists) in New York. If you are interested in their program, you can reach them by writing GMSMA, 132 West 24th Street, New York, NY 10011.

For you guys on the East Coast, there's a lodge off I-81 in Tennessee where you can stay, individually or as a group, which is strictly geared to leathermen. If any of you guys are planning to travel on I-81, drop me a line and I'll tell you how to reach the place. Believe me when I tell you, as I understand, this is a leatherman's dream come true. I will go into more details in next month's column.

Fakir Musafar

DANCES SACRED AND PROFANE

All Photos by Fakir Musafar except where indicated.

This man is different. I have never met anyone like him in my life. In his everyday personality, in his three-piece suit, glasses and new car, he looks like any other businessman. But there is someone else there. That person is a shaman, a spiritual explorer, a radical sexualist who believes in "body play" and algolagnia or pain lust.

As Fakir Musafar he is striking: piercings in his nipples, large enough to stick your finger through, a black graphic tattoo that encircles his groin and shoots up his back like dark flames, piercings deep in his chest through which he hangs from flesh hooks off the ground, and piercings in his ears, nose and cock. For some, Musafar's alteration of his body pushes limits and panic buttons. But for him, such uninhibited alteration of body is a free and joyous expression of his inner spirit.

Born 56 years ago in Aberdeen, South Dakota, on the Sisseton-Sioux reservation, although not of Indian extraction, Musafar knew he was different. "I was not your normal person," he explains. "I knew this when I was six years old. I was not like these people (his parents and sibling). I was like an alien." Prone to trances, psychokinetic powers, bizarre recurring nightmares and a unique vision of reality, Musafar was disturbed by his perceptions.

But raised in a strict religious manner, Musafar knew better than to talk about these strange happenings. "It was very dangerous. Somehow I thought like an adult. This was a trap and I knew if I exhibited (these behaviors) and didn't go along with these things, I would be in jeopardy. I was much safer and more able to be free if I didn't let people know. So I kept everything that was happening very secret. I understood that these people, who were supposed to be adults, were never going to understand," he states.

These traumas began to disappear when Musafar began to experiment with his body during puberty: homemade tattoos, piercings, rows of clothespins, suspensions and weights were all part of his explorations. "I had the instinctive urge to do some of these things," he says, "and nothing was going to stop me.

No pressures or powers would stop me. And I would do it secretly if I had to." One of the first things he did was to pierce a hole in his foreskin. "I was always trying to pierce a hole somewhere. That was incredibly important to me. As important as eating and other life-sustaining things. It was very earthy. It was very sexual."

Musafar spent a lot of time out in the country. "I loved the country," he comments. "It reeked of spirits and Indian things." And at the age of 14, instinctively, he did a Sun Dance. "I rode out to this river, the Indian place nearby. I took all my clothes off, marched around this tree. For me it wasn't playing Indian. I was getting very serious. This was very real. I tied the rope up in this small tree, a sapling. And then I went back a certain distance and I had this desire, this urge, to poke a sliver of hardwood through (a small piece of flesh) and tie a cord around it and then pull against it. And that's what I did. Until it ripped out."

For over forty years, since that day, Fakir Musafar's canvas, his piece of clay, his exploration ground has been his own body. Since doing the Sun Dance at age 14 and his first out-of-body experience at the age of 17, Musafar has been digging deeper and deeper into the physical/spiritual/erotic connection. Musafar notes, "I had this great lust to know. I had so many experiences that I couldn't explain, that didn't make any sense." After extensive readings and experiments, Musafar has created a name that describes himself: a modern primitive.

Through these explorations, he has become aware of his former lives. In the 1700s in Persia, he was Fakir Musafar. "A great legend," Fakir smiles, "he was known as a kook, an eccentric, a weirdo. He had piercings, and knives stuck through his body." In the 1800s he was a Mandan Indian named Otuten Teso Muchenah, or Man with Holes in his Body. He insists, "I had this incredible urge to pierce things. I just didn't feel natural without holes, without something attached to my body. It was incredibly unreal and unnatural not to have holes in my body."

But if this side of his life sounds strange and bizarre, there is a conventional side to Musafar: college, marriage, the armed forces, fatherhood, divorce and a successful business career. He doesn't see anything incompatible between the unusual side of his life that seeks to tap into primal energy and the conventional side of his life that is more intellectual and disciplined. For him, these two beings are interwoven; they're interlinked. "They're both really visible and they balance one another. It's inconceivable to me that one could do anything creatively in the exterior world and not have another side like I have. You'd be out of balance. It's like poles on a battery, positive and negative. You've got to have both, or no current flows."

But since we have been born into a culture that is already based on discipline and the intellectual, it is Musafar's experiments with tapping into primal energy that bear similarities to sadomasochism and radical sexuality. Some examples from the Fakir training: bondage, tight belts, corsets, tight clothing (rubber or denim); isolation in boxes, cages, helmets, body suits and bags; wearing iron, chains, manacles, head cages; flagellation, piercings, tattoos; branding, hot wax, firewalking, burns, electricity, suspension by wrists, ankles, hung on cross or by piercings. They are experiences with which gay men into leather, SM or radical sexuality may be familiar.

In the beginning, Musafar was sexually turned on by his experiences. "It was fun, delicious," he remembers. "It was sexual. I got turned on. I got a hard-on and generally in the end I jerked off. You'd go as long as you could. It was prolonged because it was fun. The excitement was good. And then I realized that there was something that was strong and primal and just the other side of sexual release that was even better than orgasm. That always put an end to it and you didn't get very far. So in a sense orgasm became the enemy. You wanted to get sexual, but you didn't want to orgasm because it would prolong these things and you would reach a higher state. A greater ecstasy."

Musafar has been taking photographs of himself and his explorations since the age of 14, many of which cannot be printed in Drummer: pictures of Fakir at age 14 with rows of clothespins running on his ear and across his chest, or with pins stuck into his chest, or weights sewn onto his chest; pictures of Fakir exploring the androgyny of Indian shamans in gilded skin and masks, and burning torches; pictures of Fakir hanging from freshly pierced holes in his chest by wire; pictures of Fakir in a male corset and a tiny waist called "The Perfect Gentleman" and pictures of Fakir with giant C clamps attached to his chest and androgynous mask.

But more attention has focused on Musafar's suspension off the ground by piercings in his chest than any other thing. Brought into public consciousness by Richard Harris in the movie, "A Man Called Horse," the O-Kee-Pa ceremony was outlawed by the United States Government as were other native American people's rituals that were considered to be "torture rites." It is one of the paradoxes of radical sexuality that pain can lead to pleasure and that what the experience feels like is ultimately different from what it looks like.

And at the same time, Fakir laughs and warns that it's not good to get too serious about this trip. "You can't get too heavy about anything. That's the one neat thing you learn about Indians if you hang around them for too long. They're never serious. They'll get you right up to the brink and then they'll pull out their cocks and piss on you,"

Musafar will tell you about his path, but he makes it clear that there are an infinite number of paths to fulfillment and enlightenment. He clearly notes that "anybody can have the experience. But you can't have it unless you want it and when you want it. You have to go to great personal pains to get it to happen. But you don't need to be chasing gurus, and you don't need a holy book and you don't have to come to me to get a technique. You can find the resources within yourself if you want to badly enough."

An immense amount of love pours from Fakir Musafar's heart. He leaves me with a crystallization, "They (the spiritual explorations) don't always work. But not to try, not to explore, not to throw caution to the wind, that's death. That's really death. Losing a body isn't too bad. But living in one and not doing anything with it—is death. If there's a moral, that's it." □

PUNCTURED PECS! No need to wonder if the Fakir is serious about body play. He leaves us with this piercing image of obsession—just to give the boys (and men) out there something to think about.

Why VITA MEN?

We went to the physician developers of the best megaformula for men and told them we wanted a better one. Better ingredients with no oils to be retained in the system, no starches, sugar, sodium, fillers or shellac for "time-release." Each table to be complete to eliminate an assembled pack to swallow all at once. Less money spent on the packaging—more on the contents. The result was the first VITA-MEN in the homely brown bottle with the black label. Later we analyzed the other big-name formulas. There wasn't much they excelled us in, but the doctors revamped our formula and now NO ONE comes near us. VITA-MEN is formulated with you, the active man, in mind, not some mass market. You can pay a bit less or you can depend on your catch-as-catch-can diet to protect you. But in our opinion, VITA-MEN and IMMUNITABS are the best investment you can make in yourself!
